SOLOMON BATTLE FURY RISES

750,000 Nazis Closing In Around Stalingrad

25 ARMORED DIVISIONS LEAD THRUST

Panzer and Infantry Divisions Crash Through Russian Lines Outside City.

SITUATION VERY GRAVE

German Planes Seek To Level Town With Wave After Wave of Bombings.

BULLETIN

BERLIN (From German Broadcasts)—(AP)—The Russians in violent fighting have been thrown back farther eastward toward Stalingrad, where great fires are raging as a result of continuing night and day attacks by the German air force, the German high command reported today.

(By United Press)

MOSCOW—A German battle force of 750,000 men, spearheaded by an estimated 25 armored divisions, was reported today closing in on Stalingrad from three directions despite fierce Soviet resistance.

Soviet reports placed Nazi advance guards less than 40 miles from Stalingrad due west of the vital Volga river industrial and communications center.

Front-line dispatches said the Germans are approaching Stalingrad from the northwest, west and southwest with crushing pressure that is crowding the Soviet defenders into an ever-narrowing defensive front.

One of the dangerous Nazi thrusts—that moving down on Stalingrad from the northwest—was said to have been checked, at least temporarily, but there was no indication that the German push was losing any of its momentum.

The Germans were placed about

Diplomats Home From Japan

Among the 246 U. S. diplomats and consular officials who returned to the United States from Japan aboard the exchange liner Gripsholm was Edward S. Crocker, first secretary of the American embassy in Tokyo, seen being greeted by his wife at the Jersey City, N. J., pier. It was Crocker who received Japan's belated declaration of war last Dec. 8.

150 Gripsholm Arrivals Taken To Ellis Island

JERSEY CITY, N. J. — Government officials announced today that about 150 passengers among the more than 1,400 repatriates aboard the diplomatic liner Gripsholm had been taken to Ellis Island for questioning.

While there was no official comment on the reason for this, ostensibly it was because officials had found their papers unsatisfactory or wished to question them more intensively.

The U. S. immigration station is on Ellis Island and it is there that enemy alien hearings are conducted. There was the possibility that some might have been transferred there because of illness, since there is also a government hospital on the island.

Until last midnight about 300 passengers—including all of the American diplomats—had been disembarked, but by 10 a. m. (EWT) today only about four or

The second member of the committee from the district is James Neville, Delaware. They were appointed by Charles M. Beer of Ashland and Mary B. Snow of Mt. Vernon, state central committeeman and committeewoman from the district.

Announcement of the appointment was made following the meeting of the party's state central and executive committees yesterday in Columbus.

They May Not Be Solomons, Though Their Idea's Good

Solomon, in all his wisdom, never was confronted with a greater problem, in the opinion of Patrolmen Don Mitchell and John Steel, who were called on yesterday to settle a long-standing feud of two Wood street neighbor women.

"She calls me names repeatedly," No. 1 feudist told the police.

"She lets her chickens dig in my garden," No. 2 retorted.

"That woman cut down my plum tree," No. 1 declared.

"She tells me to shut my mouth after she picks a quarrel," the neighbor cried.

Mitchell and Steel pondered. Their parting suggestion was that each remain, more or less silently, on her own side of the fence.

BRITISH COURT MOURNS OVER KENT'S DEATH

Popular Duke, 14 Others Die In Crash of Flying Boat In Scotland.

ON WAY TO ICELAND

Husband of American Heiress Among Victims; Royal Scion To Be Buried at Windsor.

(By United Press)

LONDON — Britain's Royal court began four weeks of mourning today for the Duke of Kent, King George's youngest brother who was killed on duty with 14 others in an airplane crash yesterday.

The giant Sunderland flying boat taking the 39-year-old duke to Iceland crashed in desolate country in northern Scotland only 60 miles from its take off, it was understood today.

With the popular duke died his private secretary, Lieut. John Lowther, heir to the Viscounty of Lowther, and his Royal Air Force aide, Michael Strutt, second son of Lord Belper, and husband of the former Ariella Frazer, of Detroit and Newport, R. I.

Mrs. Strutt is the daughter of Joseph Washington Frazer, former Chrysler Motors executive and head of the Willys-Overland Co. of Toledo.

Strutt worked in Wall Street in New York for a time. He enlisted in Canada after the outbreak of war.

Search parties were sent out to scour the countryside and the bodies were recovered. Arrangements were made to bring the duke's body to London. It was reported that the duke's body was now lying in a Scots Highlands castle.

It was understood definitely, a United Press dispatch from a Scottish center reported, that the crash was not due to enemy action. Other planes have crashed at almost the same dangerous spot.

King George and Queen Elizabeth were expected to return to the London area from the country to receive the duke's body.

One of the king's first acts after he received the news of the death

CALLS DOMINION FIRE 'ACCIDENT'

FBI Agent Finds No Evidence of Sabotage in Blaze at Defense Plant.

Following an investigation by an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation yesterday's early morning fire which swept the paint room of the Dominion Electrical Manufacturing company, Elm street, was declared an "industrial accident" with no final indication of sabotage.

An FBI agent, assisted by members of the police sabotage squad, quizzed the seven workmen who were in the room when the flash fire started and searched the debris left by the conflagration. One heavy and two light explosions in munitions containers were caused by the accidental compounding of highly explosive chemicals used in paint, the examiners decided.

Plant officials late yesterday estimated damages may reach $35,000 as a result of the fire which, starting with brilliant flashes at 1:15 a. m., was battled for three hours by firemen from central and No. 2 stations. Fog sprays were played continuously to extinguish or control fires in several naptha drums. Luckily, fire department and plant officials said, flames could not reach a large buried tank of naphtha which, when sealed is highly explosive.

Sabotage squad members reached the scene soon after firemen arrived. Preliminary investigation disclosed the possibility of subversive activity. Aid of FBI agents was asked by the army agent who is in charge of war material inspection at the plant.

British Mourn Crash Death of Duke of Kent

The tragic death of the Duke of Kent, 39-year-old brother of Great Britain's King George VI, in an airplane accident, profoundly shocked all of Great Britain and cast a pall of grief over the royal family. The duke, seen wearing the uniform of an R. A. F. commodore in this recent picture with his family, met death when the huge Sunderland flying boat which was taking him to Iceland crashed in northern Scotland, killing all aboard. Authoritative quarters emphasized that the flying-boat had not been attacked by enemy planes.

Mansfielders Who Stay Up Late See Full Moon Eclipse

Mansfielders last night had their best view of a total eclipse of the moon in recent years. Observers who wanted to stay up that long saw it totally shadowed by the earth for 48 minutes, beginning at 11:01 p. m.

Cloudless skies and the clear atmosphere made the lunar spectacle appear at its best as the earth's shadow gradually blotted out the full moon, making it appear as a clouded blood-colored disc.

The eclipse began officially at 9:02 p. m., but the shadow was so small at first that observers did not notice it. Not until 10 o'clock could the observer viewing the spectacle with the naked eye detect a small "bite" out of the moon at the lower left side.

The shadow moved to the right until the entire face of the moon was covered. By 12:35 a. m. today the reddish tint had disappeared, but the eclipse was not over for the astronomers until about 1:30 a. m.

The eclipse, first since 1935 to completely hide the moon, was visible over a large part of the world.

Warmer weather and showers were forecast for tonight. After reaching a low of 43 degrees this morning, five degrees above yesterday's low, the mercury began a gradual climb today and registered 66 at noon.

Light frost was reported yesterday morning in the Bellville and Newville areas, causing some damage to garden crops.

SCRAP BREWS ON ROAD VACATION

Opposition Develops to Plea of Residents; Hint of 'Market' Heard.

Legal fireworks are expected Tuesday night when city council considers the proposed vacation of Davis road between Edgewood road and Chevy Chase which has been protested by J. M. Dickson, original owner of the plat.

Owners of abutting property some weeks ago filed a petition with council declaring that block of Davis road is of no value as a thoroughfare and constitutes a weed-strewn nuisance, and that they would oppose any improvement of the section. Nor will it be needed by those who ultimately live on the adjacent sections of Chevy Chase, the petition recites.

Dickson, residing nearby on Dickson parkway, opposed abandonment of any part of Davis road, declaring he contemplated establishment of a business section in that neighborhood and will need the street as an outlet.

Today inquiries were made at City hall by Dickson regarding the need for a permit for the moving of a barn on his property to a "site 100 to 200 feet away," indicating the structure will be remodeled for use "as a super-market or something like that."

Such an enterprise will be bitterly opposed by the petitioners, according to a communication to council from the law firm of Henkel and Gongwer. Attorney Henry C. Huston represents Dickson.

JAPS RUSHING HELP TO BIG ATTACK FORCE

Thunderous Sea-Air Warfare Spreads Over Widening Pacific Area.

U. S. LOSSES SECRET

Enemy Risking Major Part of Fleet in Struggle For Control of Ocean.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Battle of the Solomons apparently raged with increased fury in a widening area today as the Japanese rushed reinforcements for a huge armada seeking to recapture American-held shore bases.

Locked in thunderous sea and air engagements which may possibly determine naval supremacy of the Pacific, American forces inflicted severe damage on enemy warships and planes in the southeastern group of the Solomons while about 450 miles west Allied planes from General MacArthur's headquarters smashed at an eastbound Japanese convoy.

The entire picture of the spreading conflict was far from complete but reports from the navy here and from MacArthur's Australian headquarters made it clear that Japan was risking a heavy portion of its fleet in a desperate effort to dislodge American Marines from their hard-won positions in the Solomons.

The counter-attack, fully expected by the navy, already has brought bombing or torpedoing of more than a half dozen Japanese ships in the Solomons plus the strafing of two transports and destruction of a gunboat off southeastern New Guinea.

The damaged vessels included one large and one small aircraft carrier. Only eight carriers were known to have been part of the enemy fleet before Pearl Harbor, although others undoubtedly have been built secretly. Six Japanese carriers were sunk in the Midway battle, one probably destroyed, and three others damaged there and off the Aleutian islands.

Additional punishment in the Solomons battle was inflicted by Allied carrier-based planes on a Japanese battleship and several cruisers. U. S. aircraft left another enemy cruiser and transport in flames.

Thus far there have been no reports on the extent of American losses beyond the minor damage

U. S. Arms Output Can Support Full Army, Says Officer.

LONDON—(U.P.)—American ordnance production has reached a scale sufficient to support a full sized army in the field in Europe, Brig. Gen. G. M. Barnes, assistance chief of ordnance, United States army, and head of the design division of the war department, said today.

"The only problem now remains the question of transport to get the materials here," Barnes said.

Barnes refuted suggestion of German superiority in equipment, for example its much vaunted 88-millimeter (3.46-inch) guns. "The United States has many surprises," he said.

Bricker Backs City Guardsmen Who Lost Pay While In Camp

Kenneth Beal, 37 West Arch street, will not lose pay, for the period he was away from his city job to attend maneuvers in July with Co. F, Third regiment, Ohio State Guard, he was advised in a letter yesterday from Governor John W. Bricker.

In reply to Beal's appeal, Governor Bricker deplored the action of city officials in approving the pay deduction and declared he would communicate immediately with Mayor W. J. Locke, recommending restitution.

Payroll records in the office of Auditor Paul L. Kelley show that Lester L. Linham, superintendent of city garbage disposal, deducted $14.40 from Beal's pay for the first half of August, with the notation "State Guard at Camp, paid $14.40 by state."

Beal said he protested to Service Director Fred B. Wolff, who approved the payroll, but was advised nothing could be done about it. He then wrote to Governor Bricker.

When the State Guard was created 18 months ago to replace the National Guard which was called to the colors, municipal, county and industrial and commercial officials agreed members of such military units would not forfeit pay during attendance at camp or while on other duties, persons familiar with guard affairs explained today. Officers of Co. F, said other employers paid their workers for the camp period.

Beal is employed as a helper on a city collection truck.

Larry Adler Says—

Some of my best friends are people:

Clare Luce (actress, not writer) is just in from London. Looking for names to go overseas and entertain the B. E. F. and the A. E. F. . . . At the recent finger-printing of celebrities in Duffy Square, the Little Flower told Lanny Ross, "Every night its trouble in my house. The kids won't go to bed until they hear your program." . . . Yehudi Menuhin, who said he'd never join the musicians' union (to keep it from becoming a monopoly, he explained) has gone and done it.

Larry Hart is cooking up a play with Ferenc Molnar . . . and no Rodgers music? . . . When "Let's Face It" closed, Ernie Holst and Jimmy Gardner saw Mary Jane Walsh off to the train for Boston, presented her with a jeroboam of champagne . . . from Harmon, N. Y., she sent them this fancy piece of alliteration. "Bathed in bubble bath beginning to blubber bawling for the boys its wonderful love and kisses Mary Jane" . . . Judy Canova's sister nnie plays a good boogie piano . . . And Major de Seversky plays the accordion! . . . Pinza, cleared of F. B. I. charges, will sing for the Treasury.

Short poems about big people:

Maggi MacNellis has too many fellis . . . jellis?

Saroyan's Cloyan.

What's Cookin Wit Bookin?

Advance tip: If you start telling everybody now what a hit young comic Willie Shore will be at the Paramount, then when it turns out you're right, you can claim he's your discovery. . . . The Drane Sisters are at the Fountain Room . . . the right act in the right place? . . . What about this trio for a benefit program? . . . Connie (oh, all right, Con-Nee) Boswell, Jane Pickens, and Maxene Andrews. . . . So who's going to sing harmony? Carlos Montoya at the Rainbow Room . . . one of the great guitarrists . . . Morton Downey was booked into the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago . . . by Mayor Kelly, no less. . . . Can't imagine Xavier Cugat's crew sans Miguelito Valdes, who is leaving to start his own ork or maybe open a club. . . . What's Cugat that I ain't gat? . . . Leonard Feather's cute record quize show "Platterbrains."

Pat Rooney II, says he is dancing in kilts now . . . to conserve cloth . . . (and actually there's more material in kilts) . . . Phil Baker has engaged a girl valet because of the manpower shortage . . . that's winning the old war! . . . Don't those gals-about-town look gorgeous in their various uniforms when you see them in the night clubs . . . except they're not supposed to take a drink while wearing said uniform. Products like Victory Sun Glasses. Ray for patriotism. . . . The Russian War songs, recorded by the Red Army Choir, make our Tin Pan Alley efforts sound anaemic.

"Gimme Dat Old Time Religion" must have been written by Tschaikowsky on account of already two song hits are lifted from it . . . "Jingle Jangle Jingle" and "One Dozen Roses" . . . Before Shostakovich's 7th Symphony had even been premiered, Toscanini had first radio rights, Koussevitsky, the first public performance and Stokowski, the recording rights. . . . Look for a pop version from Freddie Martin called, no doubt, "2nd Front, I Love You." . . . Fascinating game: Count how many times Gabriel Heater uses the word "tonight" in his news commentaries. . . . Burgess Meredith (I'm the one who doesn't know him well enough to call him "Buzz") told his friends, as a gag, that he was writing his autobiography called "Almost Finished Now" . . . but his Army paper believed it and ran the item.

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD — Anna Neagle and her producer-director, Herbert Wilcox, have brought back from England their new picture, which is splendid, and their old problem concerning their next one. Shall it be serious, or another of those musicals?

"Wings and the Woman" is definitely serious. It is the life story of Amy Johnson Mollison, England's great aviatrix who lost her life serving her country as a ferry pilot.

Coons

Anna Neagle's performance is best described by the reaction of Amy Morrison's parents when they saw the film in England. They sat in silence for many moments after the screening, then they thanked Anna Neagle. They called her "Amy." It is such a fine piece of work that her return now to such frivolities as "No, No Nanette!" is practically unthinkable.

THE Wilcox-Neagle team has one film to do in Hollywood before returning to England. Their inclinaton is to do another with a bearing on the war effort. Miss Neagle has always preferred her dramatic films to her musicals - a preference not always shared by the fans who pay the freight, as she admits. And now the idea of a purely escapist movie has no appeal to her. The war is too big, too much in the people's minds to attempt ignoring it—and Miss Neagle believes that pictures have no more rights than other industries to business as usual.

Her producer is of similar mind. "It's very hard to tell what the public wants," he says, "but it is certain there has been a revolt against the philosophies of the 1920's—the F. Scott Fitzgerald—Flaming Youth — pseudo-smartness school. There is no place now for the old stories of society people and their trivial problems. And when we make dramas, appealing to people's emotions, we have to be sure that our subject is big enough, important enough, to be worthy of their interest—and their tears. We might say that people, torn by the war, have begun to ration their emotions—with none to spare for small tragedies."

WINGS and the Woman" was made at the Denham studios. German incendiaries burned out the players' dressing rooms during production, but fortunately no high explosive bombs fell nearby.

Robert Newton (the Jim Mollison who will have the ladies raving) had a six-week furlough from his minesweeper in the channel to play the role. Wardrobe and sets were of strictly rationed material. On adjoining stages David Niven, on furlough from the Commandos, Richard Greene, Leslie Howard and Noel Coward were all making movies. Furloughs for picture work are granted readily.

DEMS UNITE IN DRIVE TO OUST GOV. BRICKER

Pick Horstman and Jones To Head Committee in Harmonious Session.

(By International News Service)

COLUMBUS—An Ohio Democratic party, thoroughly united for the first time in ten years, today drafted plans to unseat the Bricker regime in the November election under the leadership of Albert A. Horstman, re-elected chairman of the state central committee, and Darrell S. Jones, named head of the executive committee. Both elections were unanimous.

Harmony was the keynote as the central committee elected at the Aug. 11 primary held its organization meeting. John McSweeney, the party's gubernatorial nominee, urged the retention of Horstman, Dayton printing firm executive, and the election of Jones, Newark insurance man who managed McSweeney's successful primary campaign.

Following the partial selection of an executive committee, Jones was empowered to select the date and place of the platform convention. He immediately chose Sept. 18 and 19 in Columbus.

As the meeting opened Horstman turned the chair over to McSweeney, who introduced his fellow candidates on the November ballot, each of whom spoke briefly urging party solidarity.

State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson, defeated by McSweeney for the gubernatorial nomination, pledged 100 per cent support to his victor, asked the party workers to stir up interest in the campaign, and predicted a Democratic victory and "an end to Brickerism in Ohio."

Horstman placed the debt of the Democratic party at $32,517—a $17,348 deficit from the 1938-39 campaign and a $15,168 deficit from two years ago. McSweeney pledged his part in seeing that the deficit was wiped out, and asked cooperation in the payment of party debts on the premise that "no party can exist if its credit is bad."

He stated, however, that he would not, if elected, ask any appointee to contribute to the war chest as a prerequisite to the job.

Congressman-at-large Stephen Young cited McSweeney's record as a soldier and statesman, pleaded for "unity for victory," declared that the Republicans would be lucky to carry three congressional districts, and predicted his own victory over his Republican opponent, congressman-at-large George Bender, by 200,000 votes.

Mansfield Girl Scouts will participate in a nation-wide Girl Scout Victory Fund campaign, starting Oct. 1, which, through the purchase of war savings stamps, will build up a reserve "for the alleviation of distress among the children of the world as soon as conditions permit."

In announcing the campaign today, Mrs. John W. Graham, Mansfield Girl Scout commissioner, explained that between Oct. 1, and Thanksgiving day, each Girl Scout and adult in Scouting, will be asked to increase the purchase of war savings stamps for the Victory fund.

Mrs. Graham said that the stamps will be exchanged for war bonds with the understanding that the latter need not be held to maturity if it seems wise to release the funds earlier.

COLUMBUS—As rival factions predicted victory for their candidates, a sharp fight for the $5,000-a-year office of secretary-treasurer of the Ohio State Federation of Labor moved toward a showdown today.

The battle between Thomas J. Donnelly of Columbus, who has held the post for 28 years, and Phil Hannah of Cleveland reached the floor of the federation's convention yesterday in a turbulent session following Donnelly's annual report.

Donnelly suggested the convention might consider providing for a full-time president. President Michael J. Lyden of Youngstown has served without pay.

William E. Finegan of Cleveland, sixth vice president, told the convention that he and not Donnelly was the first to suggest such a move and that Donnelly opposed it.

Donnelly countered that Finegan had been active in a "political" campaign to unseat him and that Finegan made the suggestion privately and not in board session.

John Rhorich of Cleveland, fifth vice president, declared that Finegan's suggestion was made in a board meeting and termed Donnelly's assertion a "deliberate lie."

TWO SPEAKERS FOR MANSFIELD LABOR DAY PROGRAM SELECTED

Michael J. Harris, Philadelphia, president of district No. 7, United Steel Workers of America, and Sherman Dalrymple, Akron, international vice president of the United Rubber Workers of America, will be the principal speakers at Mansfield's "all-out" Labor day celebration Sept. 7.

Others on the program will represent crafts affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Harris reputedly was the person primarily responsible for the Bethlehem Steel Corporation's recognition of the steel workers' organizing committee of the CIO, according to Joseph Scanlon, former Mansfielder now with union national headquarters.

Dalrymple has been identified with the rubber industry for many years.

Public address system microphones will carry the messages of the various speakers from the platform to be built on the north side of Central park to all sectors of the square. Thousands are expected to hear this program which will follow immediately after the parade, which, starting at 10 a. m., is forecast to be the greatest pageant in Mansfield's history.

Following the speaking events the afternoon and evening will be devoted to dancing, floor shows, athletic events and a five-bout boxing show at North Lake park.

Unity of all labor unions is being stressed by the arrangements committee, with all civilian defense units, military, patriotic and fraternal organizations being invited to join in the march. Military mobile and foot units from Fort Hayes have been asked to participate.

Laff-a-Day

"Then do I give it a little shove?"

The women's corridor of the Richland county jail has a mascot these days. It's a month-old pigeon answering to the name of "Pete." A great favorite with the nine members of this particular cell block, "Pete" has been a resident there since the women asked to keep him after he fell out of his nest at the building and a trusty was about to put him on the roof for safe-keeping from prowling cats. By day he sits on the iron railing of the corridor door and shares the meals of the group. At night he insists upon being covered with a paper.

The owner of a stranded carrier pigeon was being sought today by Louis Wolf, 145 West Sixth street. The bird, brought to Wolf by a Shelby resident who found it on his window sill, was too weak from hunger to even pick up food and had to be fed by hand. Wolf is keeping the bird with other pigeons in his loft until its owner can be found. The left leg band bears the number, 164-6. The right band is marked A. U. 42—B. P. C. 705. Wolf said that the identification marks indicate that the bird is not an army pigeon but is owned by a member of a pigeon club.

A new prisoner at the county jail who hasn't become familiar with the jail routine called Deputy Sheriff Glenn Humphrey to the door this morning and ordered an elaborate breakfast, concluding his request by pulling two peaches out of his pocket and asking that they be served to him with sugar and cream. Humphrey asked him if he had his sugar ration book with him. The prisoner said he left it at home. "Then you can't have peaches," the deputy said, adding that most of the rest of the meal he ordered was "out" too.

Military drill during the past few weeks at the Mansfield armory has prepared the corps for the event which will present more than 120 Red Cross volunteer workers in uniform.

WOMAN INJURED

Galion Passenger Hurt When Two Cars Collide.

A Galion woman was injured yesterday afternoon when the car in which she was riding collided with another, one mile south of U. S. Route 30 at the intersection of Millsboro and Crestline roads.

Mayme Reynolds, 75, a passenger in a car driven by Erwin E. Bagley of Crestline, received a shoulder injury in the accident. She was treated by a Crestline physician.

State highway patrolmen said the accident happened when Bagley made a left hand turn from the Crestline road on to the Millsboro road in front of another car operated by Marion M. McCune, 21, of Galion R. D. 1. Both cars were damaged.

STEAL KEYS, SLASH GUARD DURING BREAK

Prisoners Lock One Man In Control Room, Brandish Knives in Fight.

CINCINNATI — Two of six prisoners who overpowered guards and, armed with butcher knives, forced an escape from Hamilton county jail last night were recaptured early today.

Orville Lockhart, 19, and Ernest Riddell, 23, submitted peacefully to Deputy Sheriff William Holtke and a city police squad under Lieut. Lloyd Simon at the home of Lockhart's brother-in-law, James L. Spaulding, in suburban Fairfax. Spaulding was held and will be charged with harboring the fugitives, Holtke said.

Lockhart and Riddell, arrested together July 9 on charges of burglarly, told police they had separated from the other fugitives after the six fled into downtown Sycamore street from a jail elevator exit.

Still hunted here and in nearby Kentucky and Indiana were Elsa Houtchens, 23, of Louisville, Ky., jailed on an automobile theft charge; and three Cincinnatians, Frank L. Wiener, 31, charged with receiving stolen goods and defrauding an innkeeper; Eugene Woon, 32, awaiting grand jury action on charges of forging a government check; and Paul Douglas, 17, held for juvenile authorities on charges of stealing.

The break started in the main corridor or "bull pen" of the fifth floor jail when three of the six men seized the keys of Guard William B. Fishback, 58, and locked him in a steel-doored control box.

The men ran to the kitchen where they forced Guard Joe Pohlman, 62, into an ice box. With table knives they pried open a metal locker and took eight butcher knives, three of which were found in the jail after they escaped.

Near the elevator lobby three other men joined the trio and they called to Jail Clerk William Maynard, 48, that one of the guards had fallen to the floor in the prisoners' quarters.

"When I opened the door to look," Maynard said, "all rushed at me, brandishing knives." The clerk was slashed on the hand as the six fought past him to the office of Police Dispatcher Elmer Bowersox, 35, who was struck on the head. He said he turned and saw a knife and heard a prisoner threaten: "Open your mouth and your throat's gone."

Bowersox and Maynard were forced into an elevator, taken to the first floor and shoved behind a pile of automobile wheel rims while the men fled, slamming a self-locking door that prevented jail employes from following.

FEWER TIRES

County Quota of New, Recap Tires Reduced.

Richland county motorists will get fewer tires and recaps next month and they will be watched more closely for speeding and otherwise abusing their tires.

Although the actual county quotas had not been announced today, the Ohio quota for September is 33 per cent below August on new passenger tires, and James Bailey, county rationing clerk, said the county will have to share the reduction.

Complying with a request from Gov. John W. Bricker, state and county officers are citing motorists for driving more than 40 miles an hour and reporting violators to the rationing boards.

Eclipse, Blackout Aid Killers In New York Flight

NEW YORK — (AP) — Gangland guns found two unwitting allies last night when the double cover of a city-wide blackout and a lunar eclipse they spurted flames of death from a speeding automobile and escaped in the confusion of darkness and wailing police sirens.

Four bullets fired from the car felled Salvatore Maggio, 36-year-old suit presser, as he stood near his parked automobile on a Brooklyn street at 9:23 p. m. (EWT)—just two minutes before an army-ordered "red" air raid alert set sirens awail.

Police prowl cars already were shrilling the warning for the surprise raid alert test when they received the alarm for the murder car, while at 9:01 p. m. the earth's shadow had begun blotting out the moon, almost as if in conspiracy with the slayers.

With pedestrians running for shelter, and both man-made and heavenly light blinking out rapidly, police missed the killers' sedan, which was further indistinguishable because it was black.

STAGGER SCHOOL HOURS

JAPS RUSHING HELP TO BIG ATTACK FORCE

Thunderous Sea-Air Warfare Spreads Over Widening Pacific Area.

suffered at the opening of the conflict on Aug. 23, when 21 Japanese planes were listed as destroyed in an attack on Guadalcanal island.

Approximately 150 miles west of the convoy action, MacArthur reported destruction of 13 grounded Japanese planes and silencing of an anti-aircraft battery in two surprise attacks on Buna, on the southeastern New Guinea mainland.

Southward, Allied fighters claimed destruction of several beached Japanese barges and supplies.

United States advantages in the possibly decisive sea battle were expected to lie in the fact that the marines have had time to dig in and consolidate their positions since they stormed ashore on the islands two and a half weeks ago.

Supported by substantial navy and army sea and air forces, the defenders, as at Midway, had the advantage of being able to send land-based aircraft against a sea attack.

After the navy's first communique yesterday on what it termed development of an expected "violent attempt" to recapture the American-held bases, one official who declined to be quoted by name, expressed the opinion that "we are winning the second round of the battle of the Solomons."

But, he added quickly, "the round is not over yet."

Allies Shatter Jap Convoy Off Solomons

GEN. MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Australia —(U.P.)—Allied planes of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's command, in a blazing day of action 700 miles west of the southern Solomons, have made shattering attacks on a Japanese convoy and three big enemy bases, it was announced today.

Sighting the enemy reinforcement convoy, apparently including troop carriers off the tiny Tobriand islands 210 miles east of the new Japanese base in the Gona-Buna area of New Guinea, Allied bombers sank one gunboat by direct bomb hits and heavily damaged two transports with gun fire

Forcing their way over the dangerous Owen Stanley mountains of New Guinea through sheet-like tropic rain, Allied fighter planes made two surprise attacks on the Gona-Buna base.

Despite bad visibility, the first wave silenced an anti-aircraft gun position and set fire to three Zero fighter planes on the Airdrome.

The second wave left 10 more enemy Zeros aflame.

Japanese planes made no attempt to intercept.

Newsmen Wait Word On Solomons Battle

PEARL HARBOR — (INS) — Newspaper correspondents at the headquarters of Admiral Chester W Nimitz, commander-in-chief of the United States Pacific fleet, still were without any official word today on progress of the new naval battle in the Solomon islands area.

Admiral Nimitz notified the press at 2 p m. yesterday (7:30 p m. EWT) that no communique on the Solomons would be issued.

(Editor's Note: No communique was forthcoming from Admiral Nimitz up to 4 a. m. EWT today (10:30 p. m. Tuesday Hawaiian time). The last word from Admiral Nimitz on action in the Solomons was issued last Saturday morning.)

Chinese Attacking Walls of Air Center

CHUNGKING —(UP)— Chinese forces are attacking the walls of Chuhsien, important airport center in Chekiang province and already have captured several strategic points around the city, a Chinese army communique said today.

Chinese attacks have been particularly heavy in the southern and western suburbs of the ancient town, which the Japanese captured last spring when they made their drive south from Hangchow to clear the Chinese from coastal areas that could be used by the Allies as bases for direct bombing attacks on Tokyo.

Chuhsien, Kinhwa and Lishui were the three most important air fields and the enemy took all of them. But now the Chinese have driven the invaders from 15 county seats in Chekiang and Kiangsi provinces and are besieging both Chuhsien and Lishui.

WASHINGTON — (INS) — In a statement of policy, N. G. Burleigh, chief of the WPB's services branch today told operators of commercial laundry and dry cleaning plants that raw materials for production of new equipment will be impossible to obtain for the duration.

Burleigh said, however, that if existing equipment is "judiciously allocated and carefully husbanded, there will be enough to go around."

FDR PLANNING THREE TALKS

Will Be Heard Aug. 31 and Sept. 3-7; Living Costs Speech Scheduled.

country on a plan now being evolved to combat inflation.

The September 3 speech will take place at 12:30 p. m., Eastern War Time, and the immediate audience will be an assembly of the International Students Service here, including students from all of the United Nations.

Stephen Early, presidential secretary, said.

"The president will speak through this assembly to the youth of the world everywhere, in United Nations and enemy countries, too, if they can be reached, emphasizing the duties, responsibilities and opportunities of youth in the days of war and in the days of peace that will will follow."

Early said an effort would be made through the army, navy and office of war information, to complete arrangements for men on naval and coast guard vessels and men in military camps, wherever they may be, to hear the chief executive's talk.

The Aug. 31 address, which will be about ten minutes long, Early said, is set for about 4:30 p. m., Eastern War Time. The navy will arrange for the program to reach navy units and hospitals at stations all over the world where representatives of the bureau of medicine and surgery are on duty.

Many of the United Nations, including Russia, The Netherlands and England, Early said, are sending official delegates to the students assembly.

Mr. Roosevelt revealed yesterday at his press conference that he was preparing a plan to keep down living costs by stabilizing both wages and farm prices. He said both labor and agriculture must make sacrifices, tough sacrifices, and that restrictions could not be placed on one without being imposed on the other.

He called the labor leaders, Philip Murray, CIO chief, and William Green, AFL president, to the White House today to go over the situation as he already has done with farm and other groups.

No final decision has been reached, but the president said he hoped to have something ready to announce to the country in a radio speech, and simultaneously in a message to congress, before, on, or after Labor day.

Whether new legislation would be sought was problematical, as Mr. Roosevelt said time was short and spiraling of costs may get out of hand in 30 days. Administration leaders began calling absent congressmen back to Washington, however, to receive his message.

City's First WAAC Leaves To Start Training Tomorrow

Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana, or Fort Thomas, Ky.

"I don't have a very good idea of what we'll have to do," said Officer Candidate Thompson, "but I volunteered because I believed in the idea of a Women's Army Auxiliary Corps."

Then as an after-thought she added, "I also like to travel and thought we might be shipped around." That the WACCS stand a good chance of being "shipped around" was revealed this week by the trim director of the WAAC, Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, who said that 600 of them would compose America's first women's A. E. F. to England.

But military discipline at the Fort Des Moines Training Center won't be exactly new to Miss Thompson. She has been drilling weekly with the Mansfield Squadron of the Civil Air Patrol under officers of Company F of the Ohio State Guard and taking orders for pilot practice missions from squadron officers.

She has had 105 hours in the the air and is qualified, under CAP rulings, to carry both personnel and equipment. She obtained her private pilot's license in June, 1941, and since the Mansfield Squadron was organized, after Pearl Harbor, has given hours of volunteer clerical service to the Municipal Airport.

Graduate of Northwestern university, where she majored in commerce, she is the daughter of Mrs. K. J. Thompson, 511 Marion avenue. One of her brothers is also in the service, Lieut. Kenworthy Thompson, who is stationed at Camp Livingston, La.

150 Gripsholm Arrivals Taken To Ellis Island

five more had left the ship and a customs official said it would take several more days at least to clear all the passengers who were brought here from the Orient in exchange for Japanese and Thai nationals in this country.

As the big white ship docked yesterday with American, Canadian and Latin-American diplomats, missionaries, newspapermen and business men, federal investigators clamored aboard from cutters to prevent any undesirables from slipping into this country.

Even the more than 1,000 American citizens aboard were being questioned.

A government official said yesterday that any under suspicion would be transferred directly to Ellis Island for further examination, rather than be held aboard, in order to expedite clearance of the vessel.

JERSEY CITY, N. J —(UP)— Kingsley W Hamilton of Wooster, O., for the past two and a half years vice consul at Saigon, French Indo-China, said he heard about the declaration of war at 3 a. m. on Dec 8

"A few minutes later there was a knock on the door, and as I opened it, Japanese soldiers marched in," he said. "They told me I was not allowed to leave the house."

On Dec. 11, Hamilton was interned with seven others in the British embassy until June 3

"Food was plentiful but we were not able to buy it. We had to send our servants out to get food. We were not allowed to leave the embassy, but we were allowed to go into a small yard," he said.

Hamilton said that as far as he knew, the Japanese had not interferred with freedom of worship.

"The same goes for schools," he said.

CONVICTS SEEK SUICIDE POSTS

Want Dangerous Army Jobs Instead of Going to Prison.

DENVER —(INS)— Two convicted postoffice robbers today awaited action of a federal court on their plea for permission to enlist in an army "suicide squad" instead of going to prison.

In their plea to the court the two bandits, James Bowers, 30, of Bridgeton, N. J., and Thomas Glenn Abbey, 25, of Detroit, wrote:

"It hurts when we read of what some fellows are doing for their country—some dying for it—and we realize what we are doing. We feel we belong alongside of them."

HOUSE RECESS NEARING END

Irate Southerners Protest Senate Change In Soldier Vote Bill.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The month-old informal house recess today appeared headed for an abrut end as irate southern members levelled their guns at senate revisions in a bill to permit men and women in the armed forces to vote by mail.

Their principal objection, they said, was to the senate amendment exempting service members from payment of the poll taxes required by Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Texas, Virginia, South Carolina and Arkansas.

The senate adopted the amendment by a vote of 33 to 20 over the opposition of southerners who termed it an invasion of states' rights to determine the qualification of their voters. The house previously rejected a similar proviso.

750,000 NAZIS STRIKE CLOSE TO STALINGRAD

Armored Units Crack Soviet Lines, Planes Batter City Steadily.

75 miles northwest of Stalingrad, and 85 miles southwest of the city in addition to the deep penetration due west of Stalingrad.

Fighting was said to be raging over a rectangular front area about 105 miles long and 40 miles wide between the Don, the Stalingrad-Novorossisk railroad and the Volga.

In the north Caucasus, the Germans were advancing rapidly behind the retreating Russian forces south of Krasnodar.

Huge German panzer and infantry forces had crashed through Russian lines, bulwarked by reserve forces which Marshal Semyon Timoshenko was sending into action.

The wedge advanced straight for Stalingrad and the Volga river line, with the Russians desperately hammering it. Finally, after "an exceptionally heavy battle" with Soviet tank forces near "inhabited points," it was checked, dispatches to the army organ Red Star said.

Nevertheless, the situation grew more grave by the hour. German planes bombed Stalingrad, a city of 290,000 people, in waves, trying to reduce it to the rubble and ashes in which they had left the Crimean fortress city of Sevastopol.

(The Italian radio said Stalingrad was burning after the heaviest German air attacks. "Numerous buildings in the city have been destroyed after repeated hits and are fiercely burning," it said. "The central railway station is aflame.")

German losses were fearful, but it was not doubted that they would pour more men, more tanks, and more planes across the great bend of the River Don in an effort to take one of Adolf Hitler's most coveted objectives.

(An Italian radio broadcast said the suburbs of Stalingrad, sprawling on both sides of the Volga, had been evacuated, and every house turned into a fortress.)

A communique acknowledged another withdrawal on a sector of the front south of Krasnodar, in the north Caucasus. There the Germans had driven dangerously close to the Soviet Black sea base of Novorossisk, which is 63 miles from Krasnodar.

(The Italian radio said civilians were being evacuated from Novorossisk.)

Dispatches reported stiffer Russian resistance in the Prokhladnenski region, although the Germans still advanced on several sectors toward the oil fields of Grozny, 85 miles from Prokhladnenski, and toward the Caspian sea, 185 miles away.

The noon communique reported that the Germans had attacked north of Voronezh, on the upper stretches of the Don, but had been repulsed.

On the Stalingrad front the Russians were hemmed into a narrow space between the Don and Volga rivers with their northern and southern communications cut, and subjected to a never-ending onslaught by 58 German divisions, totaling at least 500,000 men.

The Russians appeared to have no recourse except to make a fighting withdrawal, exacting the heaviest possible toll of German lives.

Stevedores worked night and day, presumably loading the machinery of Stalingrad's valuable war industries on boats to be carried to places of safety. It was believed most women and children, and all civilians not essential to the defense of Stalingrad, would be evacuated.

The Germans within a few days had driven across the River Don at a point 40 miles west of Stalingrad and to the area directly northwest of the city. Russian defenses in the great Don bend had been broken after weeks of heroic resistance.

Hint Allied Thrust In Mediterranean

BERN, Switzerland—(AP)—The Rome correspondent of the Tribune De Geneve said today that reports of Allied concentrations of transports and warships at Gibraltar and west African ports were current in Italy, where they were interpreted as possible preparations for opening a second front.

The correspondent said "these considerable concentrations," according to views held in Rome, might be intended as reinforcements for Atlantic convoys, "but it is also thought possible that they are destined for use in a surprise attack in the Mediterranean basin similar to that at Dieppe."

The correspondent said Italians are pointing to French Tunisia as "the most exposed point" in the Mediterranean and asserting that "Anglo-Saxon enterprises against French possessions have succeeded very well." (The reference presumably is to the occupation of Syria.)

The writer said an Allied attack on Tunisia would put Allied forces at the back of the Axis armies in Egypt.

Other Mediterranean areas, he continued, are considered well prepared against "all eventualities."

British Reply To Night of Raids

LONDON — (INS) — A strong force of British bombers swept out over northern occupied France today following a night of widespread attacks against separated points in England by the Nazi Luftwaffe.

Two German raiders were shot down over a south coast English town. Their bombs demolished houses and caused a number of casualties.

Other Nazi craft attacked points in East Anglia.

The air ministry said that East Anglia felt the shock of a few bombs near the coast but that there was little damage and only slight casualties. Some incendiaries also were dropped. Most of the bombs fell in rural areas.

Red Planes Destroy 11 Nazi Vessels

MOSCOW—(INS)—Eleven German vessels, including five transports and two torpedo boats, have been destroyed by Russian fighter planes and Stormovik cannon-bearing divebombers on Lake Ladoga, it was disclosed today.

The ships were part of a large Nazi convoy bearing reserves across the big lake, in the Leningrad area.

STAMP VALID

No. 8 Will Now Get You Five Pounds Of Sugar.

COLUMBUS—(INS)—Ohio household sugar users today were reminded by the rationing division of the office of price administration that ration stamp No. 8, which now is valid, is good for five pounds of sugar, but that it does not change the basic ration of one-half pound a week per person.

The five pounds must last through the 10-week period expiring Oct. 31, the OPA said.

DUTCH SHIP SUNK

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— The navy announced today that a small Dutch merchant vessel was torpedoed and sunk by an enemy submarine in the Caribbean area about the middle of August. Survivors have been landed at a gulf coast port.

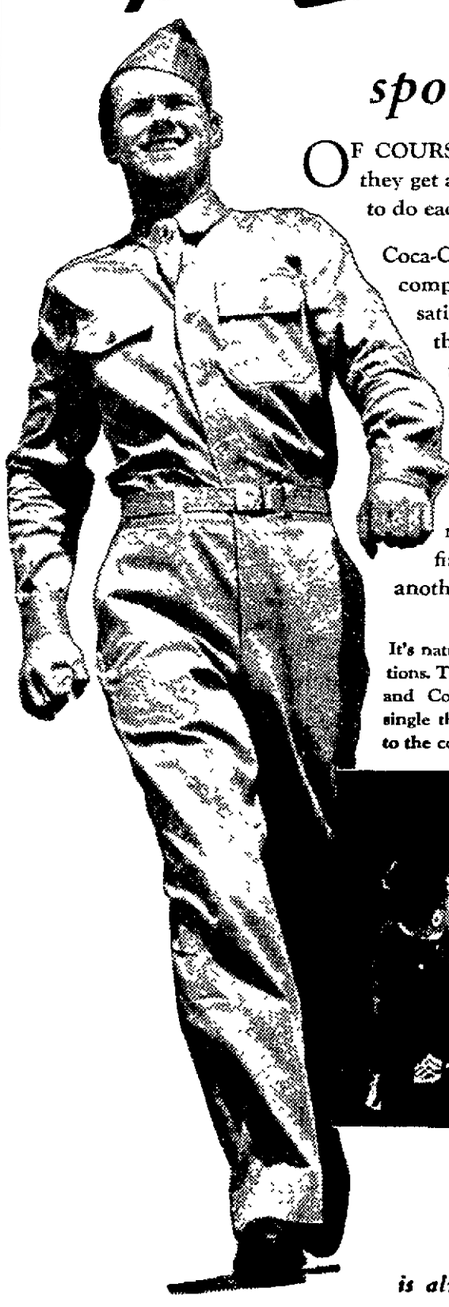
That Extra Something!

...You can spot it every time



OF COURSE the Armed Services get Coca-Cola just as they get all the good things that are wanted and needed to do each job.

Coca-Cola has that extra something to do the job of complete refreshment. It has a taste that's uniquely satisfying—a quality that's unmistakable. And there's a real reason for that. Coca-Cola holds the original secret of unique refreshment... a finished art in its making... a blend of wholesome flavors that can't be copied.

Your experience has discovered this special something in Coca-Cola... delicious taste with no cloying after-taste... refreshment in the finest form. The only thing like Coca-Cola is another Coca-Cola.

It's natural for popular names to acquire friendly abbreviations. That's why you hear Coca-Cola called Coke. Coca-Cola and Coke mean the same thing... the real thing... "a single thing coming from a single source, and well known to the community".

At U. S. O. recreation centers, you'll see how happily ice-cold Coca-Cola "cuts in" to make "intermission" a refreshing moment on the sunny side of things. It makes for morale.

MANSFIELD, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 26, 1942.

All men are born equal—it's the degree of improvement that counts.

Unheard remark: "I eat carrots and spinach because I like them—not because they're good for me."

Eighteen-year-old Lois Andrews has discovered she is too young to be happily married to 44-year-old Georgie Jessel—which is something that even her worst friends might have told her.

United States Cannot Win Alone

WITH frankness that may not be untimely, Martin V. Coffey, state commander of the American Legion, told delegates to the Ohio Federation of Labor convention in Columbus this week that "we're not the world champion," that the position of the United States is similar to "a second rater, trying to struggle up from the canvas," that "we have a long way to go and it will be a long road back."

Urging home front workers to do their utmost to back up the armed forces, Commander Coffey warned against the "sabotage of carelessness" and listed loss of the Normandie by fire, release of Communist Earl Browder from prison, lack of American history teaching in schools, and publication of several "sub rosa" papers as examples of "sabotage of carelessness."

Over confidence has been, and continues to be, a dangerous trait among many Americans, with apparent assumption among some of them that the United States is able, if need be, to win the war without outside assistance.

Such self confidence might also be felt by a mouse that had never seen a cat, but among those who realize the power of the Axis military machine, and the ferocity of the men who operate it, the present peril of the United States is not being minimized, and few have given this subject more attention than members of the American Legion, for whom Commander Coffey is now the Ohio spokesman.

Every move in the titanic struggle going on in Russia is of vital concern to people of the United States, for Russia is throwing millions of men and vast war equipment into the battle to save not only itself but Great Britain, the United States, and all other anti-Axis nations from subjugation by Hitler and his cohorts.

Only lack of realization of the tragic outcome of defeat can justify failure of any American to co-operate to the extent of ability in the national war effort—without thought of profits, wages or sacrifice of customary comforts and conveniences.

Death Visits Royal Family

ACCIDENT, rather than the unusual dangers of war, accounted for the death of the Duke of Kent, youngest brother of the king of England, with circumstances not unlike those which have resulted in numerous fatalities in the air service in this country and elsewhere in the world.

As is customary in such instances, it is the death of the Duke of Kent that is given prominence in the news, yet in their own family circles the death of each of his crew members is of as great importance and occasions equal grief among loved ones.

Dangers which cannot be avoided in the ordinary course of living are multiplied by requirements of war and it is in the needless toll of human lives that the ruthlessness of warfare appears at its worst.

Whether in Europe, Russia, Africa, China, or in our own United States, there is a sanctity of human life that commands respect and this is one of the great reasons why every effort should be made to bring this war to a victorious end at the earliest possible moment—so that there will be no unnecessary sacrifice of lives, either in royal families or among those from humble homes.

Becomes Permanent Postmaster

LONG REGARDED as a political plum, to be handed out every four years in recognition of partisan activity, the office of postmaster has been accorded life tenure under civil service, like other positions in the postoffice department.

This makes the new appointment of Herman E. Homberger as postmaster of Mansfield a permanent one, rather than for the customary four-year period which had heretofore been in vogue, and it is gratifying that permanency of appointment should come at a time when the position is held by a man who is well qualified for the job and who gives unstintedly of his time in performance of its duties.

Whether a change of federal administration from Democratic to Republican will bring later effort to remove civil service protection from Democratic incumbents is a matter for future determination. Meanwhile a large majority of Mansfielders will be well satisfied to have Mr. Homberger continue in the office.

Rental Income Exceeds Needs

RECOMMENDATION by Mayor Locke that sewer rentals be rebated for the final quarter in 1942 merits favorable action by council if it is found there is no real need for the money that would be brought in by this collection.

Purpose of the rental charge, as originally passed by council, was to distribute the cost of maintaining adequate sewage disposal service after a new and more expensive service had been installed, and there was no intention of establishing a surplus in excess of needs.

It appears that a sufficient reserve fund is being maintained to meet probable repair and replacement costs and that this would not be disturbed by temporary suspension of rental collection.

While the individual rental charge is not large it amounts to an appreciable total which should not be collected unless needed.

War Dare Not Play Favorites

THE GRAVEYARD of reputations was what they called Spain in the Napoleonic wars, because generals who had done well elsewhere, like Napoleon's generals Soult and Massena, there for the first time met defeat and failure.

North Africa is getting to be like that. The British have removed General Auchinleck, who not long ago was put in, with high hopes, in place of General Ritchie. Ritchie in his turn succeeded Cunningham, and Cunningham followed Wavell. All were well thought of when they started, some still are; but all were beaten by Rommel and replaced. That is war. Whatever its cause, defeat means demotion.

OUR BOWLEGGED SENTRY

War Submerges Mutual Dislikes

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON — If the straw poll kind of an outfit known as the British Institute of Public Opinion had a suspicion that we Americans aren't overly popular among John Bull's subjects, it wasn't very tactful to start a regular investigation to make sure, with a view to broadcasting the verdict, whatever it might turn out to be.

The Institute did it, though, and reported that "slightly more than 25 per cent of the British don't look upon Americans favorably."

True, this wasn't an adverse majority, but it was a rather disagreeably sizable fraction. It wasn't implied, either, that even the 25 per cent mentioned feeling any outright hostility toward us; we simply grate on their nerves.

Mrs. K. C. Hunt, squadron officer in the British Women's Auxiliary Air Force, who has been on duty in this country since early in the war and who disagrees wholly, with her home folk's grumpy 25 per cent, advances the interesting theory that our respective languages are too identical without sounding exactly alike, as we mutually speak 'em. We Americans resent English broad vowels, as affectations of superiority, and our nasals fret our English cousins, as liberties taken with a collection of pronunciations that they invented.

Mrs. Hunt's opinion is that two countries which must study back and forth, to understand one another, presently should get so that they DO understand one another.

Superficial Understanding.

On the other hand, we and the British, because we initially understand each other superficially, never became basically well acquainted.

That's "Squaff" Hunt's reasoning, anyway.

(Squaff is an English abbreviation of "Squadron Officer of the Women's Air Force. It's comparable to Waacs in our own service.)

Perhaps linguistics do figure in our relations with the English, Northern Irish and Australians.

An American officer can go to China, disapprove of the fashion in which Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek is conducting his campaign and make some slurring remark about it without being comprehended a syllable's worth. He can do it in Russia also. But let him drop some snippy remark in London or North Erin and he's due to be quoted all over the British islands.

On his own part, HE knows it if he visits Australia and some Anzak drops an observation to the effect that Uncle Sam doesn't seem to him to be making an all-out effort in the Southern Pacific. It's been alleged, too; the Anzaks feel that they've been considerably neglected.

Canada and the United States are, for a fact, first-class partners.

The truth is that the Canadians growl about London's inefficiency more audibly than we do, on this side of the border. I hear their spokesmen doing it, here in Washington. Their reactions are the same as ours, on general principles, but they're more candid in expressing 'em. Our inclination is for a certain amount of politeness about it; their sentiment is that they "belong," and are entitled to be as critical as they choose to be.

There are some other things involved in the situation, however.

Britain is tremendously more tightly pinched than we are.

Jealousy Inevitable.

Our doughboys and blue jackets get over to the other side and swish their Yankee money around ad libitum. It simply drowns out the local crowd and it's natural of 'em to feel a bit jealous.

Then, again, our gang is a romantic crew.

There are reports that they've made a hit with the gals, to an extent to disorganize British courtships.

There was one of these cases in Northern Ireland recently.

The accused doughboy was acquitted. It was done, though, by an American court-martial. I've no doubt it was a just verdict, but it's understandable that Irish sentiment should wonder if it wasn't prejudiced.

Listen World!

'Isle of Escape'

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

AS I WRITE this we are all wondering what's happening in the Solomon Islands and in the Aleutians. For that's how we see war, in places infinitely remote, where bombs are bursting and big guns firing. Yet, as serious and far more insidious a war is going on under our very noses and is affecting us as drastically as any clash in the Coral Sea.

The war of mental maladjustment—that's the toughest contest we humans can tackle, and it wastes and wrecks more lives than all the military equipment put together. You can, if you're lucky, duck a bomb or dodge a sub. But it's a hundred times more difficult to escape the intangible menace that besets you when your own mind goes into a tail spin . . . as millions of minds in America are going today.

Actually we are facing two wars: the war of planes and destroyers, battleships, submarines and tanks, and the war of our own fear, bewilderment, lethargy and irritation. This internal war is hitting all of us as the realization of our danger grows upon us and the need of adjustment to a new and difficult world.

Worst of all, it is hitting the refugees who have fled to our shores. For them the Old World has gone forever and, with it, all they knew of life. America is as strange to them as if they had awakened upon another star, and our own bewilderment is vastly magnified in their disorganized spirits. The rape and massacre of Poland and Greece were not more hideous nor more far-reaching in their effects than the dislocation of these strangers who come to us seeking a home, and the need to aid them is as pressing as any relief we may send overseas.

That's an angle of the war that few of us think about, yet which will affect every one of us sooner or later. There's a new book which pictures it more poignantly than anything I've read. It's called "Isle of Escape," by that grand novelist, reporter and all-around woman, Isbel Ross (Harper & Bros., publishers).

Long ago Ishbel Ross came to know immigrants as only a New York newspaper woman can know them. But they were different immigrants then. They came with hope in their hearts and a definite aim. But today they come without hope or program, as bankrupt in spirit as they are in funds, and the deadly virus of their maladjustment seeps slowly but surely into our own national life.

Therein lies the greatness of the book and of Ishbel Ross's superb and subtle handling. For we are all evacuees from a world we loved but which we never will see again. Most of us don't realize it yet. We think our main problem is to win the war; we do not see that the great task is to adjust ourselves to an already vastly altered life and to the chaos which will come with peace. Not one of us can escape that adjustment. Many of us will be unable to cope with it. We will fight against change or slough away in futile grief and reminiscing.

There's only one way for any of us—European refugee or native American—to face what lies ahead and Ishbel Ross has summed it up in one inspired paragraph:

"Not in England, not at any time until she saw Bill disappear toward his train, did Mary understand to the full what was demanded of her. She must hold on tight to her will — not sink into lethargy and let the days slip by in vacancy. She must live with insight and strength. She must try to meet things with integrity of spirit. Life was rarely what one desired. Adjustment and compromise went on for as long as one lived, and yesterday's hopes seemed unreasonable in the light of today."

"Isle of Escape," there's only one place where you can find it surely . . . not in New York or San Francisco . . . but only in the fastness of your own heart.

Lush Days Are Back.

Do you know what the most profitable business in Boston is today?

It's saloon-keeping, or running a night club, which amounts to the same thing. "There's new money around."

It's not really new. It's your money, your war taxes and contributions, finding its way into new places. A lot of it's being spent on a high bender by defense plant workers, the possessors of quickie commissions, and similar gentry who have discovered it's a picnic.

The pari-mutuel "handle" at Suffolk Downs, meaning the money bet on the races, in one day last week was well over $900,000. It was a special day, to be sure, with a very special race on the program, but this was something more than $300,000 better than the same day's betting last year.

If a dime buys five bullets, how many would $900,000 buy?—Boston Herald.

THE 1,776-acre Mohican state forest in Ashland county has as its distinctive feature a deep, narrow gorge in Clear Fork creek which flows eastward through it to the Mohican river. This precipitous gorge is wooded from one end of the park to the other with old forest growth. There are many beautiful vistas in the park, some of the most attractive being from Vista point, Buzzard Cliff's picnic area, the Rim trail, and the bridge where Hog Hollow and Beech Hollow roads meet.

Loss of Stalingrad By Russians Would Bring War Closer to U. S.

—By DE WITT MACKENZIE

WITH the onrushing Hitlerites less than forty miles from the great industrial city of Stalingrad on the Volga, this war is getting terribly close to our own homes and firesides.

What happens within the next six or eight weeks is likely to determine the course of the whole conflict. That's how near it's drawing to us here in America.

I don't mean the fall of Stalingrad would be decisive, for it wouldn't. Still, it would be a mighty blow against the Soviet, since the city is an integral part of her military and economic defense. Its capture would mean the cutting of the expansive Volga, that artery of transport which links the Caucasus to north Russia.

The fall of Stalingrad would make much more difficult the defense of that all-important Caucasus where the Nazis also continue to force the gallantly resisting Reds back.

The bloody drama of Stalingrad stands out starkly and seems to re-emphasize the fact that we in America haven't yet got the "feel" of this conflagration on which our survival as a nation depends. Maybe more detailed accounts of our own fighting men in action would bring us closer to realities and build morale.

Of course, we haven't got into action on a big scale yet, but we have a lot of men in battle in various parts of the world. What the folk back home need is to be moved right into the middle of the conflicts with them—fight along side them, bleed with them, and die with them.

That would bring realization of our dangers, of the sacrifices our boys are making, of the other sacrifices needed from us, and it is a grand breeder of the fighting spirit.

Example: The other night a Jap force landed on one of the Solomons and tried to overcome our marines. A communique told us that "during the night only hand-to-hand fighting was possible," but with the daybreak the marines were able to maneuver, and "of the 700 Japanese, 670 are dead, the rest prisoners. Marine losses were 28 killed and 72 wounded."

That's all we know about this historic action. Presumably the authorities haven't more facts to give us yet, but my point is that this is the type of story which might be pressed for and given to the public in full detail while it's hot. Sure, I know all about censorships—worked under 'em in war and revolution in many countries—but the fact remains that such actions can be reported graphically and fully enough without disclosing anything which would assist the enemy.

Then there's another aspect to this situation. Quite apart from the value of such publication as a morale builder, the public is entitled to all the information which possibly can be provided. They tell us that this is a people's war—and that's right.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—In recent years there were approximately 2,500 state and county fairs held in the country every summer and autumn.

Now the war is giving them an awful beating—but not for the reasons you think. Joseph Eastman, co-ordinator of war transportation, made an appeal a few months ago to cancel all fairs and expositions. The idea was to save gasoline, bus and train transportation. The protest against Mr. Eastman's suggestion was so vigorous that he felt it necessary to modify his appeal—to place it at least upon a basis of local conditions.

What has happened as a result is best typified at Chicago, where the National Livestock Show has been called off. Always held with it was the National 4-H club Congress, which has drawn from a thousand to 1,400 delegates. The last report to Washington was that a "modified" 4-H club congress would be held. Youths who had to take prize stock to market anyway would be allowed to participate. The coastal areas, far distant from Chicago, would be ruled out. This was considered a sensible wartime consideration of a transportation problem. It has been applied in many areas.

BUT in many other sections, the reported reason for cancellation of fairs and expositions has nothing whatever to do with transportation. It is based on the simple fact that the armed forces have taken over the fair and exposition grounds for quarters, training fields, and warehouses.

One of the biggest eastern fairs is the Eastern States Exposition at Springfield, Mass. Five states participate and have buildings there. The Army has taken over.

The Raleigh State Fair in North Carolina has been cancelled at Army request. Some western coast fairs and expositions have been cancelled on Army orders.

The Florida State Fair at Tampa; St. Augustine's "A Day In Old Spain"; the Edison Day Celebration at Fort Myers; and the Festival of the States Sun Celebration at St. Petersburg, all have been ruled out. The Tobacco Bell Fair at Tifton, Ga.; the National Cotton Festival at Greenville, S. C.; four of Tennessee's biggest annual celebrations; the Kentucky State Fair; and a couple of big Virginia expositions all have been written off for this year or the duration.

ON the other hand, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Kansas (except for a couple), and almost all the big Canadian fairs, to mention only a few, have been given the green light.

In many cases, it is considered that the benefits of stimulating production, circulating war economy ideas, and boosting morale through entertainment and breaks in the working routine, far offset the transportation disadvantages.

In spite of cancellations of major expositions, fairs and even some county meetings, government agriculture and war officials here believe the fair business will be better than it was in depression years. Indications are that in those sections where fairs can be held with sanction of the War Department and without damage to defense transportation, the turnstiles will click faster than ever.

Man About Manhattan

Added Attraction

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Rockland county, N. Y., is a sort of improbable never never land invented by Charlie MacArthur, the board of directors of an insane asylum, and a group of canny, though unrelated real estate dealers.

It occupies a stretch of Hudson river valley on the west side of the river about 30 miles above Manhattan. Artists, movie queens, executives, playwrights and also some very ordinary people live there in red barns and in gorgeous homes hidden away in deep-foliaged dells. Its community centers are Nyack, New City, Pomona and Spring Valley.

In winter the snow buries the highway markings and you are in country as wild as it was during Revolutionary war times. At night the sky is immutable and the stars are hostile and cold. Helen Hayes lives there. Sherwood Anderson, the playwright, lives there. Burgess Meredith lives there, or did until he went into the Army. His home has now been rented to Paulette Goddard, who is "camping out" in Rockland county this summer, and thereby hangs a facet that has sold many a war bond for the U. S. treasury and sent many an ambitious housewife to a "relief" function that she ordinarily would have passed up.

EVERYONE knows that the exotic Miss Goddard has rented Meredith's place, but no one has seen her. When a drive for the Chines or the Russians or the British is underway its backers now urge the county folk to come because they hear that Miss Goddard is sure to be there. Everybody goes because nobody wants to take a chance on missing out on the wonderful young woman with the dark tresses from Hollywood. If Miss Goddard can be persuaded to maintain her exclusiveness until the need for war relief drives has passed the treasury will have no need to worry. Her name, so far, has sent drive after drive over the top.

THE actors, artists, and writers of Rockland county have turned into airplane spotters, motor corps captains, and Red Cross workers. Charles MacArthur and Ben Hecht live there and the heavy shouldered but amiable Sherwood Anderson has been a great help in the local war effort, lending his own binoculars to comrade airplane spotters from the town and sharing the lonely midnight vigils. They all take turns spotting planes and reporting same to the defense command along the seaboard.

Rockland county is a land of gorgeous lakes and is a wild life preserve. If you can get permission to fish the watersheds you are certain to be rewarded with the limit of the law. Sometimes the permission is hard to get.

A Farmer's Diary

Making a Feeder

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I WENT to the elevator for feed this morning. Five cars were waiting to get grists ground, or to buy supplies. Over at the corner of the warehouse stood two hog feeders. From a distance they appeared as if stained dark, but when I came near I found the boards were soaked in creosote. It was a neat job. As I observed it carefully — the height, the width, and the sloping doors which the pigs would lift up while feeding I thought how fine my June shoats would do on a complete ration, with spring water handy.

I inquired the price of each size. Each was more than $20 and, without looking, I knew I had less than 20c. The elevator man is a friend of mine. "If I knew the dimensions, I believe I could make one," I said.

"Go ahead," he agreed. "Measure it. Here's my rule."

I went home and searched the place for boards. I searched the chicken pen, the barn, the attic, the cellar. All kinds of wood came to light—poplar, oak, maple, beech, chestnut, and bass.

I am only a hammer and saw carpenter...a "jack of all trades." The children helped me find the tools, and held the boards for the big one-man saw to cut them through. Small hands grabbed the hammer eagerly whenever I laid it down. I bought two extra pounds of nails before I finished.

When the job was done, except the doors and top, I turned the crude, heavy feeder right side up. "It does look like that one in town," opined the second boy, "but it's not as straight and it has lots more colors."

We dragged it to the pigpen with the car. It weighed, like a millstone.

"I believe it'll hold nearly half a ton," remarked the oldest boy. "How often must we fill it, do you think?"

I did not know. That matter would come later.

But if it serves our purpose as well as one that might cost $30 the looks will not matter—and the pigs won't know the difference.

CLUB HEALTH WINNERS FACE FINAL EXAMS

County 4-H Representative To National Congress To Be Chosen.

Health winners of Richland county girls' 4-H clubs will present themselves for final physical examinations at the city-county health department in the Municipal building, Monday morning, Aug. 31, to determine the county representative to the 4-H club congress this fall.

Examinations were conducted in 29 of the county's 32 girls' clubs during the two-week judging period held recently under the supervision of Miss Elizabeth Bay, county home demonstration agent. City and county nurses were in charge of the physical examinations.

The health contest is not limited to girls alone but will be open to 4-H boys as well. Judging of the latter group, however, has not been completed. The club congress will be held at Ohio State university in Columbus and is one of the few 4-H club activities ordinarily held during the Ohio state fair, that will be retained since the fair was cancelled this year.

Winners in the county 4-H girls' clubs are: Shirley Christiansen, South Boulevards; Beverly Switzer, Lucas; Lona Whisler, Norma Henke, Beverly Hellinger, Geraldine Rice, Betty Foster, Janee Kleilein, Ontario; Betty Taylor, Adario; Joanne Bishop, Madison township; Glorine Hale, Margaret Tingley, Weller township; Dorothy Brook, Shiloh; Beatrice Boals, Five Points; Joanne Beer, East Mansfield; Glenna Belle Ferrell, Ganges; Shirley Winters, Shenandoah; Betty Pollock, Ruth Clever, Lexington; Betty Collier, Butler; Betty Lou Freeman, Little Washington; Maxine Worner, Geraldine Spiesterbach, Barbara Schaneaur, Maxine McConkie, Wanda Yarger, Edith Robinson, Gladys Levingston, Bellville; and Eileen Munster, Mifflin.

Remember Tips When You Can

Test the tops of jars for chips or nicks—an uneven edge cannot give a perfect seal.

Wash jars and caps thoroughly in hot soapy water and rinse well before sterilizing.

Wash fruit thoroughly. Blanch peaches, apricots, tomatoes, etc., by dipping in boiling water and then plunging into cold water. Skins may then be easily removed.

A salt solution, two teaspoons salt to one quart water, will prevent discoloration. Drop the fruit, as prepared, into the solution. Wash in clear water immediately before using.

Prick unpitted cherries and plums with a fork to prevent shrinkage or bursting.

When making preserves or jellies, mix a sweet fruit with a sour one. Your sugar will go farther that way.

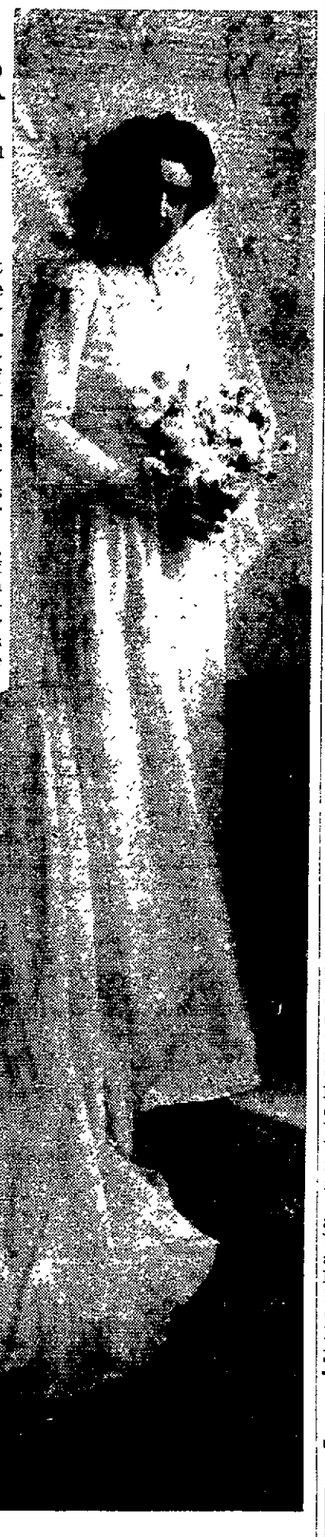
ONE of Mansfield's most beautiful weddings was that which last evening united in marriage Miss Katherine Louise Rhoads, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Austin Clay Rhoads, 770 Woodhill road, and Lieut. (junior grade) Stanley Groth Fisher, United States Naval Reserve. The bridegroom is the eldest son of Mrs. Charles Samuel Fisher of Dencer, Colo., and the late Mr. Fisher.



MRS. STANLEY GROTH FISHER

Exceptionally lovely decorations made memorable the ceremony which took place in St. Luke's Lutheran church. A hedge of snowberry formed a naturalistic effect across the front and along the sides of the chancel. Interspersed among the greenery stood many candelabra and there were tapers in beauty baskets of white gladioli. Above the altar, extending the entire width of the chancel, were banked hundreds of white gladioli. Great fan-shaped arrangements of white gladioli and lighted candles stood in the windows. During the ceremony the only illumination was that of the tapers.

Preceding the entrance of the bridal party, nuptial music was played by the church organist, Mrs. Minnie Marks Cahall. Rev. Herbert S. Garnes conducted the service at 7:30 o'clock. Guests were shown to their places by Ensign Thomas B. Kalbfus of Washington, D. C., James Carse of Chicago, Ill., Staff Sergt. John R. Fisher, Army Air Support Base, Colorado Springs, Colo., Fred Hout and J. Gilbert Baird of Mansfield. Don Herbert Fisher of Denver served as best man for his brother.

Miss Rhoads, who has been honored with numerous pre-nuptial parties, was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father. She was lovely in a gown of pure white moonbeam taffeta fashioned with a long waist and full skirt with a very long, graceful train. The beautifully beaded yoke is made in drop-shoulder effect and has a high neckline with a shallow "V" edged with narrow net ruching. Long, tightly fitted sleeves end in points over the hands.

The bridal veil of Brussells pointe appliqué lace overlays another veil of bridal illusion and extends into a four-yard train. It is made cap style with pearl orange blossoms encircling the halo. The new Mrs. Fisher's lace veil was worn by Mrs. John Paul Morin of Cleveland, a close friend of the bride, at her wedding four years ago. Her flowers were gardenias edged with a pleated frill of bridal illusion.

Gowns of the attendants were in autumn colors. Miss Marjorie Rhoads, cousin of the bride, as maid of honor was in a gladioli shade. Nile green was worn by Miss Ruth Fisher of Denver, sister of the bridegroom, who was bridesmaid. Junior bridesmaid was Miss Joan Knarr of Chicago, Ill., another cousin of Miss Rhoads, whose gown was an Egyptian rose shade. Made similar to the bride's, the attendants' gowns of moonbeam taffeta have drop-shoulder yokes of net and a deep net flounce trims the very full skirts. All of the young women wore flowers in their hair. They carried cascades of gladioli blossoms in shades harmonizing with their gowns.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Rhoads chose a gown of elite gold crepe styled with a square front neckline, long, tightly fitted sleeves and the new draped hipline. Mrs. Fisher's dress was of French blue crepe fashioned with cascading front folds. She wore a sweetheart velvet veiled turban. Both mothers wore orchids.

After the ceremony a reception was held at Westbrook Country club. The mirror-framed fireplace in the lounge room was the background for the receiving line. The fireplace opening was banked with greenery and many white gladioli were used above the mantel and on each side. The bridal table in the formal dining room was in the shape of a shallow "U." The tiered wedding cake was placed in the center and crystal cornucopia vases and low bowls of white sweet peas, ruffled petunias and white candles in crystal bases adorned the table. Maiden hair fern was fastened in a graceful arrangement to the inner side of the table. The newlyweds cut their cake in traditional Navy fashion with a sword.

Later in the evening, Lieut. and Mrs. Fisher left for their wedding trip west. They will drive to Denver, Colo., and will stop in Mansfield on their return trip to Washington, D. C., where they will live. For traveling the bride wore a suit of honey blond velveteen with brown accessories and an orchid corsage.

Mrs. Fisher was graduated from Miami university where she was president of Delta Gamma national social sorority. For five years she has been a home economist with the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company. Lieut. Fisher attended Antioch college and in 1934 joined the student training course at Westinghouse. His last position with the company was as laundry equipment sales development manager. He is now stationed in Washington, D. C., in the torpedo production section of the Bureau of Ordnance, Navy department.

In addition to members of the bridal party and the ushers, out of town guests in attendance at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Knarr of Chicago; John Van Wagner, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Sotzen, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Daugherty of Shelby; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Geary of Sandusky; Mr. and Mrs. John S. Boyd and daughter, Virginia of Galion; Mr. and Mrs. Earl Groth, Earl Groth, jr., Miss Mary Virginia Groth and Mr. and Mrs. Allen Jacobs of Fort Wayne, Ind.

Mrs. Della Cochran Tells Mary B. Mitchell Members About Program at Children's Home In Xenia.

FOR THE MEETING of the Mary B. Mitchell tent, No. 40, Daughters of Union Veterans, the regular ritualistic work was given, with Marguerite Fair presiding. Read were the national general orders No. 6 giving final instructions pertaining to the 57th annual national convention to be held in Indianapolis, Ind., the week of Sept. 13.

Most of the time was devoted to a report given by Mrs. Della Cochran, working with the Ohio Civil War Veterans' association, who told of their meeting at the Children's home in Xenia. Each organization allied with the Grand Army presented trees to the home.

The Ohio Civil War Veterans' organization gave a flag pole and flag to the new Lincoln high school at the home and also presented another flag and pole for a different part of the grounds. At the camp fire meeting, the 18 veterans were introduced, the youngest 92 and the oldest 110 years old.

An accordion band from Columbus under the direction of Charlotte Gamble and the U. S. and S. O. home orchestra played to conclude Saturday's activities.

Sunday morning a memorial service was held in the chapel. Miss Kathryn Heck, past department president of the Daughters presided. Invocation was given by W. L. Hopper, department chaplain. Following this was the presentation of memorial gifts for the chapel, given by Miss Heck; Mrs. Velma Kay, department patriotic instructor; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Sattler; Mrs. Anna Lockyer, past national president of the auxiliary to the Sons of Union Veterans; Mrs. Anna Edwards and Mrs. Ida Dillman.

The afternoon parade was headed by the home band and the American Legion drum corps from Springfield. Highlighting the activities was an address by James Garfield Stewart, mayor of Cincinnati. The re-dedication service was completed when John H. Bennett, senior vice commander of the G. A. R. presented the key to the home to the department commander of the Spanish American war, World war No. I organization and World war No. 2, represented by Sgt. Robert Schooler of the marines.

From Mansfield the committee attending from the Ohio Civil War Veterans' association, included Mr. and Mrs. Carl Sattler, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Constance, Betty and Robert, Miss Mary Beilstein, L. Capwell, Miss Bessie Dell, Miss Helen Edmonston, Mrs. Sarah Case, Mrs. Mary Brewer, and Mrs. Cochran.

On the serving committee for the evening's meeting were Mrs. Theodosia Watts, Mrs. Annie Burger, Mrs. Nellie McCracken, Mrs. Mary Watts, Mrs. Helen Walters and Mrs Rose Brown. Next meeting will be Sept. 14.

Exposure to Sun Causes Bad Burns

By MME. QUI VIVE

The girl who deliberately subjects her complexion to blazing sunlight is playing with fire. There's not much difference between the scorching of Mr. Sol's kisses and any other burn, when it is well established. First there is inflammation, then blisters form. The final stage is shedding of dead skin scales. If this happens year after year, the cutaneous covering will toughen. That is Nature's way of giving protection against further exposures.

The new, sensitive skin is especially susceptible to freckles. If sunburn is followed by tan the result may be spotty. Powder does not go on smoothly, the old rouge compact seems to have lost its magic.

If burning is deep enough, and enough skin surface affected, there is present a poisonous element that is picked up by the blood streams. Headache, even fever, may result from sunburn. Some of the dead tissue may be picked up by the blood streams. These cases are not usual, but such things have happened.

The discomfort of this affliction often has a deplorable effect upon the physical system. Nerves get to jangling. If a girl with a bad case of sunburn says she feels sick enough to go to bed it is possible that she is not making an understatement. To bring oneself to such a state through prolonged exposure to the sun seems a rather silly business.

If you tan slowly you won't suffer inflammation. This can be done by brief exposures, by keeping the skin well lubricated. The tan coloring is a protective pigmentation. We don't believe in getting too much of it because it makes the skin thick and the texture coarse. Men who work in the fields in the summer grow facial hides that look like leather. The bronze coloring becomes permanent.

Girls who have toasted their faces year after year—as happened when the sun tan mania was going strong—have regretted this indulgence.

The reflection of sunlight on water is especially hard on the complexion so, if you go in for rowing, sailing or fishing, keep your summer cosmetic at hand, use it freely. Take it to the beach with you. Apply cream before going into the water and after coming out. You can't use too much of it.

If mischief has been done and the skin feels sensitive, wash with a solution of bicarbonate of soda, putting it on lightly with pledgets of cotton.

Pitfalls of Love

(A sequel to Marriage Meddlers)
By ADELE GARRISON

"We have a number of clues which we are assiduously running down," my father went on, while I fairly held my breath, and guessed that Dicky was doing the same. "One of these points to the gang to which we believe Redfield belongs.

"We have word that the document may be passed to Redfield tonight, and it is of the greatest importance that we find out if it is so passed. I therefore wish Mary to arrange to go out with him after the theater."

"She never has gone anywhere with him after the theater," I protested. "If Noel knows—"

"Noel must not know until the evening is over, and the experiment has ended in success or failure," my father said. "Richard, here is where you come in."

Dicky gave a start of surprise, but said "Whatever you wish, sir."

My father turned to me, saying, "Noel does not attend the performances of your play?"

Orders for Richard.

"Very rarely," I replied.

"Then, Richard," my father said, "it will be an easy matter for you to get Noel to go out with you this evening. Use any pretext you wish, but see to it that he does not get back here until two or three o'clock in the morning."

Dicky's eyes sparkled with amusement and he gave me a surreptitious wink.

"That suits me down to the ground," he said. "I haven't been on a binge for a long time, and I'm sure it would do Noel a world of good to get pleasantly tanked."

"I don't doubt it in the least," my father said, with a wide grin.

As we neared the Lansfield he gave me a parting injunction.

"I shall go directly to my suite and await news from you," he said. "Get Mary over to your suite as soon as possible and give her my orders. When she has made arrangements for the engagement—time, place, everything—call me, non-committally of course, and I will come directly over to meet Mary. In the meantime, Richard, you will contact Noel."

Dicky Sends Mary.

"Let us hope this little bombshell won't explode right in our faces," Dicky said when he reached my balcony suite. "As for me, I fear the worst, but I'm on my way to Noel. Shall I tell Mary casually that you'd like to see her about something? I can ease her out, and that will be better than telephoning."

"Please do that," I urged, and in another five minutes Mary was in the apartment hearing my father's message.

"Some job!" she said lugubriously when I had finished. "And you know how Steve's going to react to this one," she added darkly. "He's going to think I've really fallen hard for him and am giving him the come hither sign."

"I know, darling, but I really don't believe it's going to matter what he thinks very long. I have an intuition that Steve is nearly at the end of his rope."

"Allah grant you're right!" she said fervently, and departed.

Mary's Success.

How she managed it, I never knew, but a couple of hours later she reported to my father that she and Stephen were having an after-theater supper at the restaurant where they dined most frequently, and my father reiterated his instructions as to what she was to do.

When he had left Mary looked at me dolorously.

"If only Noel would get absolutely blotto tonight, I might have a chance for my white alley, but as it is—"

She went to her date despondently, but when she returned about two o'clock in the morning, her face was jubilant and her eyes starry.

"Me, I'm the goods!" she announced, pulling me to my feet. "Buss me, and congratulate me."

"You have that paper?" I croaked, between fear and amusement.

"No," she said. "But I know where Steve has hidden it."

"The Authority on Authorities"

THE LAP OF THE GODS

How some of your contracts make out is a proposition completely beyond your control. It is in the lap of the gods. That is, it depends entirely on what your opponents do. If the defenders adopt one line of attack upon you, they can beat your contract. If they try another, you make it, with perhaps an extra trick. If they choose still a third method, they give you a number of extra tricks. In brief, your fate may be decided by luck. Skill counts in the long run, but there are plenty of occasions on which it is of no value to you. Don't let that make you berate your luck, however, as it is part of the game, and usually evens up eventually.

By slightly varying methods, four tables in a duplicate game produced that same contract of 4-Spades by West, some doubled and some not. The outcome ranged from two extra tricks to down one, all dependent on the defense.

At one table, the heart K was the opening, knocking out the A. The trumps were drawn, aided by a finesse of the J, and then the clubs led. As soon as North took his A, he led to the diamond A, and South fired back a heart for two tricks in that suit, beating the contract.

One North decided to open the K of his partner's diamonds. When it won, he decided that diamond singleton in dummy threatened possible ruffs, so switched to his spade 8. This declarer then got the trumps out and led a club, giving the defenders their last trick there. Clubs furnished plenty of heart discards, also a diamond, so that an extra trick was scored.

The same number of tricks came from the opening lead of a spade—a very bad lead, as only a club and a diamond got lost.

Maximum score for the declarer came where North made another very unsound lead, his club A, hoping to give his partner a second round ruff. After South played the 4, West false-carded with the 10, making North think South might have had a singleton if West strained so hard. He therefore led a second club. West had only to draw trumps and run clubs to take all the rest of the tricks.

The most important factor, to get maximum results for the defense, was the taking out of the heart A before clubs got led by either side.

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, Aug. 27.

Continued dangers and difficulties are noted among the astral forces, together with open as well as subtle, shrewd and treacherous situations that may call for most discreet, calm, well organized and concentrated behavior if grave consequences are to be sidestepped or judiciously vanquished. Any impetuous, rash, violent, precipitate or irregular action would but enhance the danger whereas circumspect, regular and orthodox tactics may attract the assistance and friendly cooperation of those in high places.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate some important developments in their affairs which may turn the tide from grave dangers, difficulties, disturbance, loss and misunderstandings, by their own discreet, restrained, regular and collected conduct rather than erratic, impetuous and violent acts or indulgences. A safe and sane course may attract the interest and friendship of powerful friends and collaborators.

A child born on this day should have a very ardent, passionate and excitable nature, but will be generous, friendly and worthily ambitious and constructive.

Lamb Dish To Put In Casseroles

By BETSY NEWMAN

If you are the happy possessor of some of the gaily colored individual crockery casseroles, you can use them for the lamb en casserole, the recipe for which I am giving you today. If you have guests this will intrigue them. You can, of course, use one large casserole for the whole recipe, but I think the guests (or the family) would appreciate the individual dishes even more. Don't give up entertaining because of the war, but use less expensive cuts of meat and make up in extra good cooking and seasoning.

Today's Menu.

Iced Tomato Juice
Individual Casseroles of Lamb
Buttered Beets
Tossed Green Salad Radishes
Spanish Cream
Wafers Coffee

Lamb en Casserole.

2 lbs. lamb shoulder
Flour for dredging
Lard or other fat for browning
12 small onions
2 carrots
4 potatoes
1 cup string beans
2 cups meat stock
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Have meat cut in 1-inch cubes, dredge with flour and brown in hot fat; season with salt and pepper and place in one large or six small casseroles. Divide vegetables into 6 parts and add onions, sliced carrots, sliced potatoes and cooked green beans to each casserole. Add 4 tablespoons flour to fat in pan in which meat was browned, add 2 cups meat stock or water and cook until thickened. Season with Worcestershire sauce, and pour thickened gravy over meat and vegetables. Cook in 350° F. oven until meat and vegetables are done—about 40 minutes.

Spanish Cream.

2 cups milk
2 tablespoons unflavored gelatin
2 egg yolks
2 tablespoons sugar
3 tablespoons honey
¼ teaspoon salt
2 egg whites
1 teaspoon vanilla

Pour milk in top part of double boiler. Sprinkle geletin over surface and heat over hot water to scalding. Beat egg yolks with sugar and salt, add scalded milk and honey slowly, stirring it in carefully; then return to double boiler and cook over hot water (not boiling) until mixture coats the spoon, then remove from heat, add vanilla and fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into large mold or small molds that have been rinsed in cold water, and chill until firm. Serve plain or with crushed and slightly sweetened fruit sauce.

UNFAIR ADVANTAGE +

CHAPTER VIII

The last of the asters and goldenrod spread a rich carpet up the hillside. But for Amy everything had gone ugly.

"I thought you said you earned your own way through art school," she said.

Paul still didn't look at her. "I did manage to here in Cincinnati. But for my three years' study in Europe—" he spoke bitterly—"Marcia paid for my tuition, my trip over, my room and board. She even paid for my cigarets! And for the parties I gave for other students!"

He paused for awhile. "Well, say it!" There was nothing in his face or voice now to remind her that a moment ago he'd said he loved her. "Say I'm a gigolo."

"What makes you think I want to say that?" she asked unconvincingly.

"Oh, I know. It's what you think. It's what everybody thinks as soon as they hear it."

She tried to speak, but the words choked in her throat.

They heard a long, "Ha-looo" from the top of the cliff. Then Daphne's voice called, "Tudor, Tudor. I see you."

And Guy Dillingham shouted, "Coming down!"

Paul muttered something under his breath. His black eyebrows drew together. He seemed suddenly a stranger. Amy had never liked him so little as she did then.

"I tell you I . . . I wasn't to blame. I couldn't help it if she wanted to—I—"

"No. I suppose you couldn't help it," she echoed.

bHe couldn't help it that his smile was sweet and disarming. He couldn't help it that his hair was curly and black like that. He couldn't help it that he had a special way of looking at a girl—as if she were the only person who existed for him at the moment. He wasn't to blame if a silly girl, riding over the hills from Washington with him, fell in love just because his arm happened to be around her. He wasn't to blame if a rich girl decided to spend a small fortune on him. No, he wasn't to blame if the girl decided. But he needn't have accepted money! He was to blame for that!

All these thoughts were formulated in the back of Amy's mind. She probably would have expressed them had not a shower of pebbles rushed down the slope. Looking up they saw Marcia peering at them through the bushes at the top of the five-foot drop. A brown leaf was caught in her bright hair. There was a scratch across her nose where the little freckles showed up.

"Catch me, Paul, I'm going to jump," she said breathlessly.

Paul held out his arms as he had for Amy a short time before. She jumped, then clung to him for a second. Still holding his arm, she turned, laughing, to Amy—so unembarrassed, so sure of herself. It never occurred to her to wonder why Paul was alone there with Amy. Life had been so good to her. There wasn't any doubt in her.

But Paul seemed to feel that an explanation was in order.

"I was standing outside the garden gate feeling as alone as Robinson Crusoe," he told Marcia, "when the gate opened and Miss Tudor walked right into me. Before she could recover from the shock I had her headed for the studio. That's the way to get a woman to look at your pictures."

It wasn't what he said, it was the way he said it! So guiltily, it made Amy feel like a sneak. Like an outsider too, pushed to the edge of the group, an employe brought along on sufferance.

She was glad when Guy Dillingham leaped down the embankment and then held out his arms to Daphne who fled through the air.

"The girl on the flying trapeze," Guy sang in a pleasant baritone as he set her on the ground.

"Hey, Tudor," Daphne cried, "I had a quarrel at the party and I swapped a little boy and they had to bring me home. I scratched him, too. And then I kicked him—"

"And she didn't do any better at Frani's party either." Her father interrupted. "Marcia didn't seem to be enjoying herself, so we formed a searching party to hunt you up."

"Anyway I wanted to show Guy some of the things we'd done to the studio," Marcia chimed in.

We! The pronoun struck the center of Amy's hurt and bewilderment. She was glad that Marcia took Paul's hand and ran ahead of them along the path that led to the studio. She was glad that Guy Dillingham walked with her. His very presence was steadying. Not looking at him, not bothering to talk—you didn't have to talk to Guy Dillingham—she felt his strength and kindliness.

Daphne clung to her father's hand on one side and to Amy's on the other. Occasionally she would lift her feet clear of the ground and swing between them.

"Here, young lady," he reminded her good-naturedly, "My arm isn't an exercise bar. Neither is Miss Tudor's."

Ordinarily Amy would have gone into raptures over the studio. But now she saw it like a scene in a motion picture in which she had no part. It was, as Paul had said, pink cement, but it wasn't silly. Or rather it was so silly that it was attractive. It was three stories high, built against the cliff, the first story very narrow, the second and third widening as the cliff widened. An outside stairway with numerous little landings to the third story.

"Topsy turvy house," Paul explained to them. "An artist built it. He said he'd modeled it after some place he lived in the Alps. But I don't believe any Alp ever saw a place like this. I'm going to hang bright-colored things over some of the little balconies as they do in Italy."

Paul was being very gay. Well, Amy could be gay too. It wasn't hard to be gay over Paul's kitchen with its long dark-stained rafters and large square chimney in the center of the room—with fireplaces on two sides of it.

"Like a kitchen in a chateau my father and I stayed in in Southern France," Amy exclaimed. "It just needs copper kettles and."

"Oh, I don't think so," Marcia interrupted—not jealousy, merely thoughtfully. "Those fireplaces aren't practical. I've been telling Paul he needs an electric stove."

"Of course I can get an electric stove any time I want one by merely waving a wand," Paul declared rather angrily. "No, I won't spoil my kitchen. Anyway I shan't use it. I'm going to keep bachelor's quarters up in the studio."

The men went to the other first floor room, and Marcia lingered behind with Amy.

"I think I can manage to get an electric stove in here," Marcia confided with a conspiring little woman-to-woman laugh.

"Would Paul accept it?"

"If I managed it right," Marcia said confidentially.

Amy was relieved when Daphne called her. Already the youngster had found the outside stairway and she was halfway up it doing a tight rope walker's act on the railing of the second floor balcony.

Guy Dillingham joined her. "These steps lead up to the studio," he exclaimed. "The inside stairway goes only to the second floor, two bedrooms and a bath. There is no way to reach the studio from the inside. You see the artist who built this had two children both as lively as Daphne."

"I didn't dream it was so much of a place," Amy said.

"No, I didn't either. When I bought this land I thought this was just a cabin. Marcia thinks it has possibilities as a home."

Amy gritted her teeth. Marcia! Marcia! Marcia! And did Paul take gifts from everyone—on all sides?

"Uncle Paul has a porch cut out on the hill," Daphne called from somewhere up above.

They followed the sound of her voice and found it to be just that. There was a ledge in the cliff at the back of the third story. It had a rock floor and little vines clambered up the cliff from boxes set about its edges. The overhanging branches of a tree shaded it on one side. A Chinese iron lantern hung over the studio door.

"Marcia thinks this is the ideal setting for the studio parties Paul says are necessary to his financial success," Guy remarked.

Tears stung Amy's eyelids. Yes, this was the perfect setting. The whole place was perfect. It was the sort of place a wife, loving and understanding her husband, could do wonderful things with him. It was a dream place. And Marcia was to be the center of the dream.

"We might as well go on in," Guy suggested. "I'd intended to let Paul play host here, but Daphne's gone in and I don't want to risk the havoc she might cause even in the three or four minutes before his arrival."

But Daphne, they found, was not making havoc. She was standing still in the middle of the great room. It contained only an easel and a chair. The walls, except on one side where a row of windows let in the north light, were bright with warm-tone pictures. Daphne, silent for once, tiptoed from one to another, a deep light in her grey eyes that were serious like her father's.

"There's my river," she said pointing to a picture.

"Yes, there was the broad Ohio curled about the blue-hazed Kentucky hills—just as Amy and Paul had seen it earlier in the afternoon—its gleam just beginning to emerge from the thick still-wet paint.

"And there's my father," the little exhibitor continued. "Uncle Paul painted it before he knew how to paint so well."

The portrait was a little stiff and amateurish. Guy Dillingham's face looked out from the canvas, younger, a little rounder, with the dreams of boyhood still in his eyes.

Amy glanced quickly at the man beside her. The eyes had not changed. But the lines about the chin and mouth had tightened, indicating strength that lent distinction to his young face—a strength that never could be cruel.

Paul came in gay and insouciant—on the surface at least—and said, "Are you inspecting my little private world?"

Why couldn't he have been strong and steady and honest! Bitter anger flamed up in Amy. The flame leaped to her eyes. And found an answering flame in his.

They faced each other stiffly, their glances crossing swords.

More news from the Portsmouth high school gridiron front:

Coach Peg Elsesser says he'll have a line averaging 190 pounds this fall. And that a lad named Flamer, who is his best ball carrier, now tips the beams at 195.

Are you listenin' Tygers? You'll be playing those Portsmouth giants one day this autumn.

Elsesser, who had a disastrous season last year, is bubbling over at the prospects for this year's club. Maybe that's why he grabbed the chance to play Mansfield.

Westbrook golfer Bob Moorhead probably will remember a sailor boy named Bob Nixon he played at Mt. Vernon early this summer when the Strohs Beers journeyed to Sunset club for a match.

Although Nixon hadn't had a golf club in his hand until that day, Moorhead had a tough time beating him.

Now this same Nixon has been picked as one of ten on the Great Lakes Naval Training station all-star bowling team and had his picture in the Chicago Sunday Sun. Versatile lad, isn't he.

He was versatile as a boy, too, playing the longest golf championship match on record, a match that lasted over three weeks. Meeting a boy named "Pood" Doup for the high school links title at Mt. Vernon, he contrived to wind up each day's 18 hole match all even, and instead of playing an extra hole, would arrange for a new match the following day. Finally the course management told the boys they could play free all summer anyhow, and might as well wind up their title match. Nixon won it the next day.

Bus Doehla, former Mansfield fight manager, now in Mt. Vernon, announces he'll have four Mt. Vernon boys on the Labor Day amateur fight show here in Mansfield.

And lists his amateur performers as Dick Kerin Speedy Stevens, and Alex and Charley Johnson.

Let's see. That was a professional fight show we had at the armory the other night, wasn't it? The one in which Speedy Stevens scored a knockout over Dan Matthews of Columbus.

The rules under which the Mt. Vernon boys fight both as amateurs and professionals are somewhat obscure.

But Doehla informed J. A. C. promoters of the armory fight that the Mt. Vernon boys get away with it. "We fight amateur or professional or any way to get a fight," he told them.

Stevens was a pro fighter nearly ten years ago And immediately after his knockout victory of the other night he ran over to the ring corner and told me, grinning: "That's the first time I've had a glove on for a year and a half."

Cardinal Backers Cheered

See Chance To Catch Up With Dodgers Yet.

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

THE cup of cheer for St. Louis baseball fans is brimming over today with the Cardinals chopping away viciously at the Brooklyn Dodgers and the Browns installed in third place in the American league.

* * *

And the people of the metropolis on the Mississippi are turning out for the show. They set a record for a night game in St. Louis Monday night with 25,588 and last night 33,260 jammed into Sportsman's park to set a new mark—and to see one of the most breath-taking baseball battles of this or any other season.

For 12 innings the struggle was a scoreless standoff between those master hurlers, Whit Wyatt of the Dodgers and Mort Cooper of the Cards Then things started happening fast Manager Leo Durocher and Coach Chuck Dressen of the National league champions were banished from the field during an argument with the umpires In the 13th Brooklyn broke the spell with a run off Cooper and the Redbirds retaliated by tying the score against Wyatt

Larry French, the veteran southpaw who hasn't been beaten by any club except St Louis, smothered the rally but in the 14th he and Rookie Les Webber were victimized for the deciding run with the Cards getting a 2-1 triumph on a close play at home plate.

It was the second straight success for the Cardinals in their flourishing bid to overhaul Brooklyn and reduced the margin between the clubs to 5½ games but it was rivalled by the big stride of the St Louis Browns far away in Washington where they captured a twilight-night doubleheader to move into third place in the American league

M Hollingsworth and Dennis Galehouse combined in a seven-hit hurling job to stop the Senators 8-1 in the first game and George McQuinn set off a rally in the 11th inning with a single to win the nightcap 3-2.

The St Louis spurt was helped by the Boston Red Sox, who clamped down twice on the Cleveland Indians 4-3 and 5-1

The New York Yankees were held to seven hits by Johnny Humphries, but the defense of the Chicago White Sox collapsed to give the world champions three runs in the seventh and Joe Gordon homered with one aboard in the eighth for a 5-3 verdict.

At Cincinnati, the eight-game winning streak of Carl Hubbell was broken as Johnny Vander Meer pitched the Cincinnati Reds to a 3-1 victory over the New York Giants.

Truett (Rip) Sewell held the Boston Braves to three hits, all of them by Tommy Holmes, and scored his fifth shutout of the season for the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-0 The Philadelphia Phils outhit the Chicago Cubs 15-12 and won 6-4

Walker Scores Close Decision

COLUMBUS—(INS)—Jack "Buddy Walker, endeavoring to make a comeback after reaching the mythical fifth rung in the heavyweight ladder nearly two years ago, today was a step nearer his goal after disposing of Clarence Brown of Chicago.

Walker was handed a decision in the 10 round go after he won four rounds lost two and tied four Brown, sparmate of Champion Joe Louis since 1939, started out like a house afire and was given a little the best of it in the first three rounds He drew first blood, slashing Walker's left eye. The Columbus fighter continued to bleed profusely throughout the fray

JOHN EVERS WAGES BATTLE FOR LIFE

ALBANY — (UP) — Johnny Evers, 59, middle man of "Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance," was waging the greatest battle of his career today—in an Albany hospital where attendants reported his condition "improved but still very serious."

Evers, second baseman with the Chicago Cubs and Boston Braves in the early 1900's, was taken to the hospital yesterday, suffering from a stroke which paralyzed his right side.

Little Bomber Gets Big Test

Detroit's Jimmy Edgar Appears in Garden.

By JACK CUDDY

NEW YORK—(UP)—Jimmy Edgar of Detroit, the "Little Brown Bomber," gets his all-important test at Madison Square Garden Friday night when he proves to the boxing world that he is either (1) a second edition of Joe Louis, or (2) just another ham-and-egger

* * *

Edgar is compared with heavyweight champion Joe Louis in his every move because he comes from Detroit, the champion's home town, because he is managed by John Roxborough—one of Louis' co-managers—because he apparently is one of the hardest hitting welterweights ever to toss leather And because he admittedly apes jolting Joe's shuffling style.

Edgar caused a mild quake in the boxing fraternity on July 31 when he knocked out Vern Patterson in the second round at the Garden, after exhibiting one of the grandest displays of straight punching New Yorkers have noted in years.

Because of that kayo, 21-year-old Edgar is being thrown into the ring Friday night with Jack LaMotta, a tough middleweight who will out-weigh welterweight Edgar seven or eight pounds. And LaMotta is favored to win at 7-5 because LaMotta is a tough, tough operator who never has been knocked out and who has lost only four decisions in two years.

If the little brown bomber gets past LaMotta in then 10-rounder Friday night, he will be in position to demand a big-money shot with any of the country's top-flight welters—such as Ray Robinson, Fritzie Zivic — or even champion Red Cochrane of the navy.

Young Edgar fights like Louis largely because Corporal Joe spent nearly two months teaching him what to do with his fists. That was at the Louis' farm near Detroit, where there's always a welcome sign out.

"Louis impressed upon me the necessity of condition," Edgar says, 'when I first came out of the amateurs, I was worried constantly about my ability to last the 10-round route. But most of the early engagements were nightmares because I was uncertain about pacing myself '

The coffee-colored negro with unusually large shoulders added, Louis always told me- if you can punch and if you're in good condition nobody can lick you Condition is most important of all '

Meredith Fisher Reaches Finals

Meredith Fisher, finalist in last year's News-Journal city girls' tennis championships, yesterday reached the finals in the same division of this year's tourney by defeating Lois Casto 6-3, 6-4.

Muriel Fisher advanced to the second round of the women's tournament through default by Mrs. Richard Schmidt.

Score by which Mrs Wendell Bell defeated Lois Quinlan in women's single was 6-2, 9-7. Score of the second set had previously been erroneously reported as 6-3.

Indians Drop to Fourth

Lack Punch To Drive Over Winning Markers.

BOSTON — (AP) — Manager Lou Boudreau probably wondered today whether his skidding Indians ever again would cross home plate more than three times in a single game.

A three-run limit that had dogged Cleveland in 15 preceding contests persisted yesterday as the Tribe dropped into fourth place—nine and a half games behind the aspiring Red Sox—by losing both ends of a double-header to Boston, 4 to 3 in 11 innings and 5 to 1.

Meanwhile, St. Louis swept a twin bill at Washington to take over third place with a lead of one and a half games.

* * *

Boudreau himself tried to show the Tribe the way to more than three runs in the opener, breaking a 2-all tie in the 11th by smashing out his second homer of the season. Then Boston came back as Dom DiMaggio singled and advanced on Johnny Pesky's bunt. Ted Williams forced Pesky at second. Boudreau was bumped so hard on the play he threw into the Boston dugout while trying for the double play at first. DiMaggio scored the tying run. Bobby Doerr and Tony Lupien were passed filling the bases. Lou Finney's hit off Ray Mack's glove drove in Williams with the winning run.

Boudreau protested his bumping so vigorously that Umpire Cal Hubbard ordered him out of the second game.

Cleveland's lone run in the nightcap came in the first inning on singles by Ken Keltner and Jeff Heath and a passed ball In their half of the first, the Red Sox tied it up with DiMaggio's triple and Pesky's fly, then decided the outcome in the third on a pass, Pesky's single and Williams' fly.

Williams went hitless in eight times at bat during the two games, and forfeited his major leagues' batting lead to Joe Gordon of the Yankees

Shooters Fire In Own Class

Divided Into Sections On Season's Averages.

By FRITZ HOWELL

VANDALIA —(AP)— Trapshooters of the western hemisphere get their one chance to fire against marksmen of their own caliber today in the class championships of the 43rd Grand American.

Based on their season's average on registered targets, the huge field will be divided into sections and battle it out over the 300-target route at 16 yards.

Top class is AA, for those averaging 97 per cent and over, followed in order by Class A (94 per cent and under 97), Class B (91 per cent and under 94), Class C 88 per cent and under 91), and Class D (under 88 per cent).

More than $2500 in prizes will be awarded.

In addition to the class title races, the state team race is on tap. Each state is permitted two five-man teams, with the winner taking down $150 and the second placers $100.

Also on the slate, left over from yesterday, were shoot-offs for the men's and women's North American 16-yard clay target championships Five men and three women battle it out for the titles after tying over the 200-target route.

In the men's race, knotted at 199, were Hale Jones of Wood River, Ill., Junior Dick of Minneapolis, Bill Drennan of Utica, Ill., Walter Beaver of Conshohocken, Pa., and H. M. Schick of Lee's Summit, Mo.

Mrs. Lela Hall of Strasburg, Mo, winner of the women's crown five times in the last seven years, and rated the greatest feminine star the game ever has known, was tied for the title by Mrs. George Cameron of Houston, Tex., and Mrs Isaac Andrews of Spartansburg, S C

Clyde Mitchell of Bridgeport, Conn, who had tied six times for the professional North American 16-yard championship, but had lost all six shoot-offs, finally crashed through with 196 of 200 to win yesterday. He nosed out his hunting partner, Clyde Wells, also of Bridgeport, by two targets.

In other hold-over events yesterday, John Eschelman of Lancaster, O., won the veterans' crown in a shoot-off, while Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Rader of Jeffersonville, O., did the same in the husband-wife race. The 72-year-old Eschelman scored 24 of 25 to defeat George Nicolai, 76, of Kansas City, who bagged 23 targets. The Raders hit 48 of 50, trouncing Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Andrews of Spartansburg, who had 45 of 50.

DO YOU LIKE BLONDES?

Suppose we asked you to look at a hundred photographs of pretty girls and select the dozen you liked best.

Sure, there will be difference of opinion. Some like blondes. Some don't. The point is that when all of you have indicated which 12 young ladies you like best, we could count your choices, just like in an election. In that way we would have a result showing definitely which 12 young ladies were preferred by the most folks in the community.

You see, if we asked you to write letters explaining which girls you preferred, we would have nothing we could count. Some of the adjectives might be flattering. But you can't add up words or adjectives and prove anything.

Of course, the Community Survey has nothing to do with pretty girls, but this will show you how it works.

In conducting a survey where we want to find out what a community prefers, we must keep it on a basis that can be counted. It is "the law of averages" which provides the absolutely accurate result in a survey.

Giant Brown Bears Roam Arctic Wastes Unmolested.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska —(U.P.)— Alaska's 30,000 giant brown bears are roaming their fog-swept, alder-jungled mountainsides unmolested by hunters for the first time probably since the Russian occupation of the Territory.

With the end of the hunting season at hand, only two sportsmen have thus far come north from the States to western Alaska for brown bear trophies. They were George Petty, Esquire artist, and his son, George, jr. Each was successful in taking a fine specimen.

MINOR DROPS SCATTERED IN STOCK MARKET

Douglas Aircraft Declines Full Point; Record Set In Power Output.

NEW YORK—Minor declines were well distributed in the stock market list in today's dealings, but a fair number of leaders held at the previous closing levels.

Down more than the average, Douglas Aircraft had a 1-point loss. The lower division included Chesapeake & Ohio, Du Pont, American Telephone, Great Northern, U. S. Gypsum, Goodrich and Consolidated Oil. Phelps Dodge, American Smelting and Chrysler were slightly improved.

Attracting attention in Wall Street board rooms was the report of the Edison Electric Institute disclosing electric power distribution for the week ended Aug. 22 at the highest level in history.

The send-out of 3,673,717,000 kilowatt hours compared with 3,654,795,000 the previous week and 3,230,750,000 in the corresponding period last year. Largest regional gains included the Pacific coast and southern states.

OPA EXECUTIVE TO EXPLAIN PRICE REGULATIONS TOMORROW

Mansfield retailers have been summoned to attend a city-wide meeting in the Chamber of Commerce assembly room Thursday night sponsored by the Retail Merchants association to acquaint them with details of the state-wide price regulation compliance drive being staged by the Office of Price Administration and volunteer merchants.

Every retailer in the city, regardless of the size of his store or the type of merchandise he sells, is expected to attend the session scheduled for 8 p. m., according to V. H. Lodde, secretary of the association, who arranged the meeting.

The government agency will be represented at the meeting by Dr. David M. Harrison, price executive from OPA, with offices in Columbus.

Dr. Harrison will explain that too few merchants have properly complied with the general maximum price regulation which requires merchants to post certain of their merchandise prices and to file considerable information regarding their merchandise stocks with OPA.

He will also point out that too few merchants have properly complied with the code and will emphasize the fact that the Office of Price Administration is preparing to "crack down" on merchants who continue to persist in non-conformity.

DR. HARRISON

Another speaker on the program will be George B. Hammond, Columbus, public relations secretary for the Ohio Council of Retail Merchants. Hammond will outline some of the plans for the state-wide compliance drive and steps will then be taken to launch a local drive by volunteer "Compliance Minute Men."

COURT MOURNS KENT'S DEATH

Popular Duke, 14 Others Die In Crash of Flying Boat In Scotland.

of his youngest, gayest brother, was to send personal condolences to families of the others killed.

Air ministry officials flew northward today to investigate the crash.

It was understood that the pilot was one of the most competent in the Royal Air Force, an expert with Sunderlands.

The duke's widow, the former Princess Marina, was still in the country with her three children and it was understood they had not been informed of their father's death.

It was understood that the duke would be buried with full military and royal honors in the Tomb house beneath St. George's chapel at Windsor Castle, where remains of other members of the Royal family lie.

Informants said that the funeral probably would be private because of the necessity, during the war, of keeping secret movements of the royal family.

Sorrow with which the sudden war death of a most popular member of the royal family was received by Britons generally was mixed with pride that he had been killed on active service as an air commodore as had so many humbler British subjects in three continents and the Seven seas.

In response to reports abroad that the crew were Americans, authoritative United States sources said that such reports were completely wrong, that no member was an American.

(Presumably the reports originated in the knowledge that American troops are now in force in Iceland.)

Normally a Sunderland, much used by the coastal command for ocean patrol work, carried a crew of about nine. The plane has a range of about 2,500 miles and a speed of about 210 miles an hour.

The duke, himself a pilot, might have been serving as one of the crew when the plane crashed.

He had been on active service since the war started. He had started out as a naval officer but after flying many thousands of miles he joined the Royal Air Force in 1940. He was then an air vice marshal, but asked to be given the lower rank of commodore so that he would not outrank the experienced officers with whom he would serve.

Three weeks ago the Duchess of Kent, the former Princess Marina of Greece gave birth to their third child, and second son. He was named Michael George Charles Franklin, the Franklin for President Roosevelt, one of eight godfathers.

The duke died exactly a year after he visited Mr. Roosevelt in the White House and inspected army and navy units near Washington.

The duke learned to fly 12 years ago. He flew the Atlantic to Canada in July last year in an American made consolidated bomber to inspect Empire Air training schools.

The duke was fourth in line for the throne, after the king's two daughters and the Duke of Gloucester.

It was uncertain whether the title of Duke of Kent would descend at once to the duke's heir, his son Prince Edward of Kent. The dukedom is a royal one and usually is bestowed by a king on one person, without the right of descent.

THEATERS

Success Comedy.

Henry Fonda becomes involved in a "success-in-eight-lessons" course in "The Magnificent Dope," the comedy showing at the Ohio with Don Ameche, Lynn Bari and Edward Evertt Horton in the supporting cast. The plot concerns a high pressure "success" institution that guarantees to turn a rustic youth into an urban executive in practically no time at all. Ameche is the salesman and Miss Bari has the role of a press agent.

Mystery Adventure.

"The Man Who Wouldn't Die," a new mystery adventure with Lloyd Nolan in the role of the ace private detective, "Michael Shayne," is showing at the Madison. Charlie Chaplin's "The Gold Rush," a re-issue, furnishes the second half of the bill. The mystery in Nolan's picture is caused by a dead man who walks and talks. Marjorie Weaver creates a diverting influence when Nolan becomes too involved in his work and the cast includes Henry Wilcoxon.

Fight Comedy.

Two prize fighters and a show girl provide the thrills in the Ritz attraction, "Sunday Punch," with William Lundigan, Dan Dailey, jr., and Jean Rogers. Dailey plays the chap who has the "Sunday Punch" while Lundigan has the part of the contender for the championship. They stage a "grudge" fight which is finally exposed as a phony while the inspiration of the whole thing, Miss Rogers, lends feminine charm to the plot. Jane Frazee and Robert Paige in "Almost Married," is the co-feature.

Sageland Drama.

Johnny Mack Brown plays the quick-shooting fast-riding driver of the pioneer freight lines in "Arizona Cyclone," the Park headliner opening tomorrow. Fuzzy Knight, Neil O'Day and Robert Strange are others in the sageland thriller in which Brown battles a gang of desperadoes. Chester Morris is featured in "Confessions of Boston Blackie" with Harriet Hilliard, Richard Lane and George E. Stone.

The five subsidiaries of U. S. Steel corporation did not contest the amount of increase, voted by the board late yesterday, but contended their contracts at the former rate were valid until two weeks ago.

As in the "little steel" case of last month, the board also granted the CIO United Steel Workers the checkoff system of dues payment, maintenance of union membership, and minimum daily wage guarantees.

No, You Won't Have to Wear a Blanket This Winter.
There'll be enough wool to go around if everyone will be careful and if every man will buy a new O'coat only if he needs one.
If you really need a new O'coat we'll have a beauty for you without taking it away from one of our boys in Iceland.
They'll be moderately priced.
